TERRY'S PLATE HANGERS AND EASELS

Some of our gadgets may come to you now in plain wire, because we cannot secure materials to give them that bright gold finish. They do the work just as well and many prefer them in their plain dress.

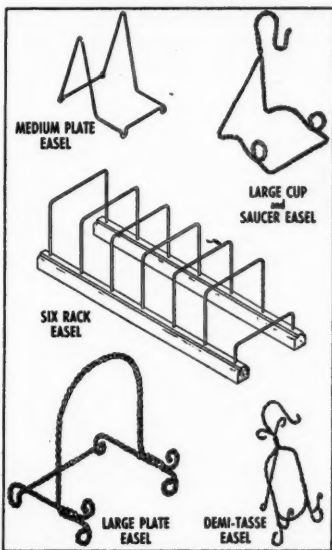

WE PAY ALL POSTAGE TO YOU. ARTICLES OF THE SAME PRICE MAY BE ASSORTED.

Dealers Attention!

Over 2000 Dealers handle these gadgets.

On orders of $5.00 or more we allow liberal discount. Write for Price List.

TERRY'S PLATE HANGERS

REGULAR HANGERS, 7-11 Inch A simple little thing made of galvanized wire and a spring. Nothing exposed on front but four little tips of wire. Fits almost all plates. Can be cut down to fit real small ones but will not hold anything larger than 11 inches. A Hanger you can easily apply, and once applied, can instantly remove—on and off when desired.

Over Half Million Sold.

RETAIL PRICE

Masterpieces of French and English Cabinet Making.

Recent settlement of an Old New England Estate brought to light a number of fine specimens of 18th Century European Cabinet making which we have purchased and now offer for sale. Pictured here are two choice items. From the same estate we have also a rare little powder or makeup table, a slant-top ladies desk, flat-top desk, small chest of drawers, tea table, two commodes and pair of chairs. Information and photographs will be sent on request.

THE REAL ORIENTAL LACQUER

By FRANK FARRINGTON

THERE HAS always been and still is some secrecy about the methods of production and application of the beautiful lacquer finish used by the Chinese and Japanese. It has decorated tables, chairs, mirror frames, screens, fancy combs, buttons, trays, tea caddies, jewel cases, and boxes of all conceivable sizes and shapes, and, most desirable of all, the wonderful oriental cabinets. The process is known to date back to the first century.

For most purposes it is enough to know the lacquer is prepared by more or less complicated processes from the resinous sap of the trees the Chinese call "Tsi," and it is secured in the crude state by incisions, much as natural rubber is obtained.

It is due to the large amount of patient hand labor involved in making and applying lacquer, as well as to the fact that information regarding the Eastern methods of lacquer making and using has never been freely divulged, that the good lacquered wares have continued to come from China and Japan. Incidentally it has to be admitted that Japanese lacquering has consistently excelled the Chinese.

Of course there was plenty of synthetic lacquering done on furniture and smaller articles in England, France and Holland about 1800, which the makers announced as "finished in the Chinese style," but none of this quite equals the real Eastern product, being, in fact, simply a fine grade of varnishing or japanning. The finest of this work was Martin's Vernis Martin, made in Paris.

The Chinese have produced two kinds of lacquer work, painted lacquer and carved lacquer. To apply the painted lacquer a semi-liquid mixture of emery powder and the prepared gum of the lacquer trees is spread over the already smoothed and polished surface with a stiff brush. This is a brownish-red paste which becomes clotty and is then dried in an oven, after which it is polished. This process is repeated from three to eighteen times, according to the quality of lacquer finish desired. The design is then sketched on and the different colors added. Gold, jade, lapis lazuli, mother-of-pearl, malachite, coral or other material may be inlaid in the design. On carved or sculptured lacquer the desired design is engraved in the thick paste just before it hardens. The finished surface is generally thick, the work solid and the style often severe and sober.

Decorating lacquer requires artistic ability, coupled with a delicacy of touch and a sure hand. The designs include all sorts of imaginary figures, birds of paradise, peacocks, dragons and oriental trees, and human beings, of course.

Upon the best of Chinese lacquer, acids, alkalis and alcohol make no impression and it will stand heat up to 150 degrees, Fahrenheit, or more.

There was much of the oriental lacquered furniture made in England and taken to China to be lacquered, just as was done with English porcelain similarly handled. And of such were many of the pieces that came to America in numbers around 1700, to find rest in the most elaborate homes of the period. Lacquer and porcelain and tea were introduced into England at about the same time, the middle of the 17th century.

The "Century Dictionary & Cyclo-pedia" lists and describes more than a dozen different types of lacquer: Burmese, Cinnabar, Cashmere, Foo-chow, Hyderabad, Peking, Guri, Hira, Wakasa, scratched, vermilion, iron, etc. To antiques lovers, however, there is just "lacquer," but obviously lacquers and lacquering involve an industry with numberless ramifications. The oldest existing examples of lacquering are of the Ming era, that is, toward the end of the 16th century.

HERE and THERE

HOBBIES carried a new item some months ago regarding Mrs. Donald Swan's collection of swans, which was started by friends because of her name. Mr. Gilbert W. Tuell, Massachusetts, who has had the life-long nickname of "Bunny," says her friends have given her various forms of bunnies and she has a collection of approximately 300, including specimens from 31 different states and foreign countries.

Mrs. Wm. Briscoe Kinealy of St. Louis, Missouri, writes commenting on John Brown's Pennsylvania home that is to be sold. Mrs. Kinealy tells about the activities of Kate Field who was a prominent lecturer in her day and gave her time to raising money to preserve his grave.

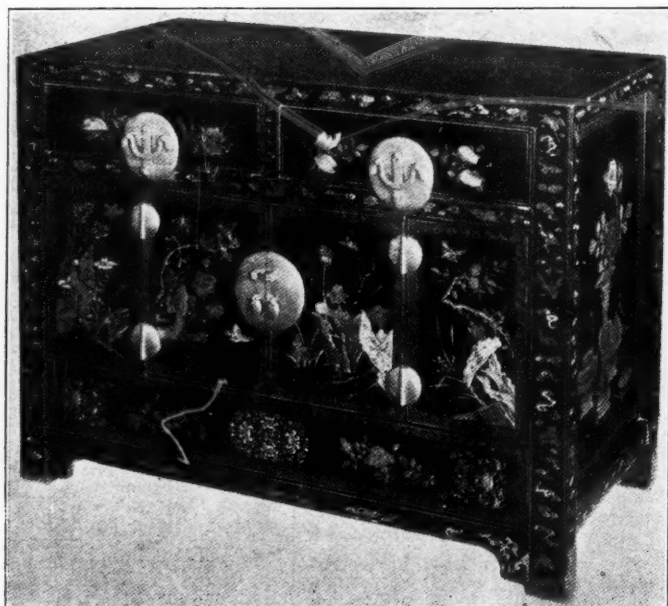

Not many people know that John Brown's fort was exhibited at the Chicago Columbian Exposition in 1893, and Kate Field again worked to raise money to remove the fort to its historic spot at Harper's Ferry. Scott Lightner, an uncle of the publisher of HOBBIES, was custodian of John Brown's fort at Harper's Ferry until his death. He was a banker in that town.

Vause Marshall of Burlington, W. Va., is a collector of John Brown historical material.

Susan-Jane's Flat-iron Trivets Were Fancy!

By FRANCES R. RICHTER

A few years ago, on the poetry page of a popular magazine, I read a "homely bit of verse called Thoughts over an ironing-board." It pictured a modern woman as she stood carefully smoothing her family's clothes while she planned and dreamed of her family's welfare.

Shortly after reading this poem I began the hobby of collecting flat-iron trivets. Every time I find a new one, my fancy strays back to the days when Patience, Constance, Prudence, Sarah, Melinda, and Susan-Jane stood for hours over their ironing-boards patiently toiling with sad-irons to keep their families' clothes smooth and crisp. Their irons were plain, but I feel that the dreams of these old-time housewives were colored by their choice of the little iron-stands on which they rested their stove-heated irons.

Plain, practical Patience (no nonsense about her!) doubtless chose one of the simple patterns, like No. 2, 3, & 5, 6, 7, 8. She had no time for dreaming. She had to finish her ironing.

Constance and Prudence (Now they had some imagination!) liked the urn design (Nos. 15-18 for it reminded them of a beautiful formal garden they had once seen!

Sarah, belying her humble name, dreamed as she ironed, about the trivets whose patterns consisted of the large letter E (Nos. 10, 11) or the combination of letters B & D (No. 12). (Perhaps they were the initials of a one-time beaux!)

Melinda, who loved beautiful clothes, chose the round "lacy" trivet (No. 13) and smiled as she pushed the cumbersome iron back and forth, back and forth over the laces and ruffles of her voluminous dresses. How well she remembered the handsome gowns she had worn to cotillions in the past! Sometimes she made up stories about the "cross and crown" (No. 19) or the "star and fan" (No. 20) stands.

Susan-Jane, whose doting parents had blessed her with a double name, was content with only the finest, even in flat-iron trivets! She chose the graceful handled trivets, such as No. 1, with crossed swords, cannonballs, crossed cannon, and the United States shield; and the "horseshoe" trivet bearing the motto "Good luck to all who use this stand." Sometimes the "wishbone" stand, No. 22, hand-wrought and maple-handled, bore the weight of her heavy iron as she stopped a moment to help small daughter who used the tiny oval iron-stand (No. 9) as she pressed the dolly's clothes nearby. Susan-Jane's choicest trivet was the hand-made solid brass one with the "star-in-a-circle" within its center (No. 23, in the second picture, leaning against the wooden vise of the harness-maker's bench). This stand has three solid brass legs riveted to its frame!

Of course, a matron of a later day, proud of her "modern" gas-lights, used the trivet whose design is a gas-iron and cord (No. 4). Even more recent is the plain metal Vulcan stand (No. 21) intended to support one of the first electric irons. (These two are not "flat-iron" trivets, I know.)

Enough of fancy! My flat-iron trivets speak, for themselves. There's a story for each one—a friend's generous gift; browsing in antique shops or the fun of looking through a basket of "junk" in a second-hand dealer's barn; or the offerings of bewildered relatives who wonder "Why on earth does Frances want that?" I can't bear to cover up their designs to use them as plant-stands as some people do; they make such a lovely decoration on the wall of my sunporch!

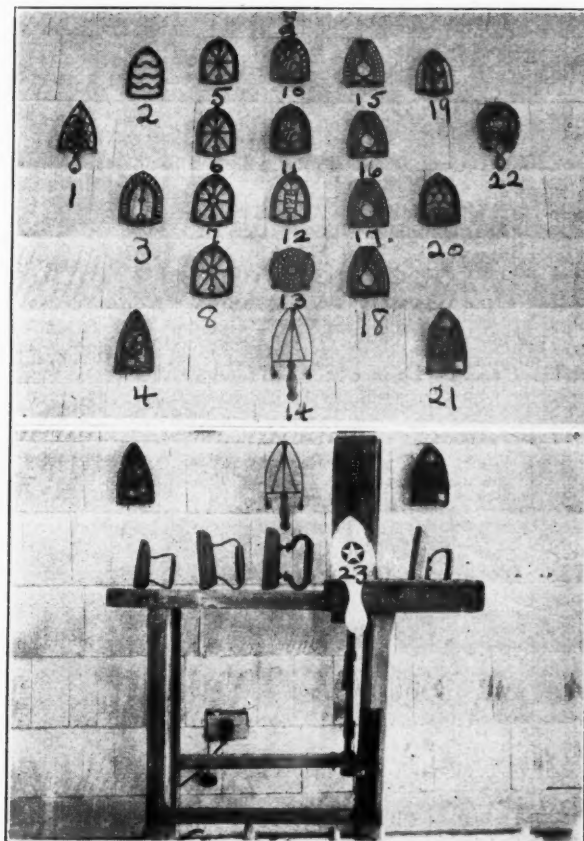

Below them, on the harness-bench, I have placed a few sad-irons. (Who knows; perhaps Susan-Jane used one of these very irons!) The smallest, at the extreme left, was for baby-clothes or for difficult "leg-o'-mutton" sleeves. One iron (extreme right), dated 1869, has a top of soapstone above the ironing surface, screwed in place by the all-metal handle. I'm sure this iron was a welcome "improvement" designed to retain the meager heat longer. At any rate, when I have a big ironing to do, I'm glad I have an automatic, heat-controlled electric iron!

Mantle-Pieces

Ship Models. Another thriving hobby interest is to be found in ship models. These are of two classes, the solid and the built up type. The solid type is carved from a single piece of wood, and the built up variety is constructed with frames and planking much in the same manner as a full-sized model. Some models are presented as a half section mounted in a shadow box and hung for wall decoration. The complete vessels are usually found without a case. A thorough inspection of the timbers is recommended to anyone who wishes to buy an old ship model. Of course, if a modern copy will do, and is bought as just that, there are many models that will give immense pleasure. We can place them above the fireplace and let ourselves be carried away in spirit by their unfurled sails, mantle-piece Magellans in every sense of the word.—Larry Freeman.

Book Reviews In Brief

Sous tous les ciels, j'ai chanté. By Emma Calvé. Plon, Paris, 1940. Printed in Canada. 295 pp., illustrated. Price $1.50 at the Book and Record Shop, 60 East 56th St., New York 22, N. Y.

I have not yet had time to make a careful comparison, but this autobiography in French seems very similar to the one in English published here in 1922 under the title My Life, except that it carries the story farther, the last entry being dated January 1, 1939. However, unless memory tricks me, this version also gives more details about the great singers with whom Calvé was associated than does the earlier book. For example, there is more about De Lucia ("de Luccia," she spells it) than there was, and Fernando's fans will be pleased with her praise of the little Neapolitan tenor. This is but one of several such instances that struck me. For those who can read French, then, Sous les tous les ciels, j'ai chanté will be more rewarding than My Life, but neither is as revealing as admirers of this magnificent singer and colorful woman could wish.

Galli-Curci's Life of Song, A Biography. By C. E. Le Massena. 336 pp., 46 illustrations and a discography. Paebear Co., 1819 Broadway, New York 23, N. Y.

Not having read this book, there is little I can fairly say about it. Apparently written more from the viewpoint of an admiring press-agent than from that of an unbiased biographer, it has not met with much critical approval. Moreover, I am told that the discography is incomplete. Still, since no other biography of the singer exists, Galli-Curci's many admirers will probably want it in spite of its faults.

Enrico Caruso—His Life and Death. By Dorothy Caruso. Simon and Shuster, New York, 1945. 303 pp. Illustrated. Price $2.75.

This biography has been reviewed so widely in newspapers and magazines that I shall not attempt a full-length criticism here. Dorothy Caruso's life with her famous husband was cut short by his death after only three years of marriage; nevertheless she weaves into her story much of Enrico's early history. As a biography, it is not the equal of the one by Pierre Key and Bruno Zirato that was published in 1922, but it rounds out the picture, and, since it includes a fine discography, no collector of Caruso recordings should be without it.

In Chapter Six, Dorothy Caruso discusses the tenor's experiences as a recording artist. The anecdotes are enjoyable, her historical "facts" questionable. She states, for example, that "in 1898 he made other recordings for a small Italian company which was later taken over by Victor." Undoubtedly she refers to the Zonophones, but the International Zonophone Company which, of course, was taken over by the Gramophone-Victor combine in 1903, was not founded till 1901.

The discography, which is credited to Jack L. Caidin of the Collectors Record Shop, New York City, is thoroughly scientific, giving not only titles and numbers, both single and double-faced etc., but also dates of recording. For the sake of the record, it should be mentioned that there are a few minor typographical errors in the discography, and a few mistakes in dates. The Pathe's, for instance, could not have been made as early as "1898/99" because one of them is an aria from Tosca, an opera which did not receive its premiere until 1900. Too, Mr. Carl L. Bruun of Stockholm, Sweden, writes that Agnus Dei was recorded in February 1913, not March 1912 and the date of Mattinata should be 1904, not 1902. (This was the last recording Caruso made in Italy.) Several collectors have pointed out that the discography fails to show that there were two different versions of the Caruso-Homer Ai nostri monti (Trovatore); others have complained that, since Caruso (or somebody taking the part of Faust) sings one word in it, the Farrar-Journet recording of Elle ouvre sa fenetre (Faust) should have been included. However, considering the fact that it lists 234 recordings, the errors are few and not too important, and the discography will serve as a handy check-list which alone many collectors will consider worth the price of the entire book.

ROBERT BAUER ALIVE

Word has just reached me that Robert Bauer, author of the internationally famous catalog HISTORICAL RECORDS, has survived the war and is back in Milan. Perhaps he will be able to take part in the revision of his book that is now being made by W. R. Moran of La Canada, California. At any rate, if further news of Mr. Bauer is forthcoming, it will be published for the benefit of our readers.

Vote For Your

Favorite Tenors

At last we are able to resume our monthly lists of favorite vocal recordings. Those of our readers who enjoyed the lists of remarkable coloratura performances published in February and May of 1943, the lists of baritone records that appeared during 1944, and the lists of contralto records which were summed up in the July, 1945 issue, will welcome this opportunity to vote for their favorite tenors.

The more votes there are, the more authoritative the results will be, so don't be a spectator, be a participant! Study the rules of the contest, play all your favorite tenor recordings until you can reduce the number of your choices to ten, make out your list carefully and mail it to me at 944 Monroe Lane, Woodmere, N. Y. Lists will be scheduled for publication in the order in which they are received, so be prompt.

Rules

1. Ten choices only. However, those who wish to list ten records by lyric tenors and ten by dramatic tenors, may do so. But the lists must be made separately and there is no guarantee that both will be printed. It all depends on how many of you decide to make separate lists of lyric and dramatic performances.

2. Acoustic recordings only. This includes cylinders, hill-and-dale discs, as well as the standard-type record.

3. List the names of the singers in alphabetical order, one under the other. Opposite each name, write the full title of the selection and the number of the record. (Note—you do not have to cast your votes for ten different tenors; there's nothing to stop you from choosing ten records by the same singer if you wish to do so!)

4. You do not have to own the record to vote for it. Rarity means nothing in this contest; the quality of the performance should be your sole guide.

EARLY AMERICAN
SHEET MUSIC DISPLAY

An exhibition of early American sheet music was scheduled to be exhibited at the Commodore Hotel, New York City, February 12 and 13. Harry Dichter of Philadelphia handled plans for the exhibition which included sheet music covering almost every phase of American endeavor, from Colonial days until the turn of the twentieth century.

The high spot in the Dichter assembly are first editions of the Star Spangled Banner and America. There are also first and early editions of Stephen Collins Foster, patriotic songs of all wars, songs associated with all our presidents, fine Washington and Lincoln items, the automobile, the airplane, California, and the Gold Rush. More recent times are represented with the automobile, the airplane, the gay Nineties, and ones still heard frequently, such as My Gal Sal, On the Banks of the Wabash, the Sidewalks of New York, and After the Ball.

(The above numbers were all supplied by our faithful contributor, George Warnken.)

Listings and discussions of the famous Victor 5000 Series records appeared in the following issues of this magazine: July 1941; October 1941; April 1942; July 1943; May 1945.

The special fascination of the 5000 Series lies in the fact that not even the Victor company itself knows how many recordings were issued in it. The discs were all recorded in Europe, in 1901-02-03, by The Gramophone & Typewriter Ltd. (G&T), and issued here by Victor in 1903. Some were Red Seal, others black; most were 10-inch but a few were 7-inch. At present we do not even know how many of the 5000 Series records were Red Seal, but we have reason to suspect that certain titles may be discovered that are unknown to us now. When the first 5000 Series discs were announced, photographs of Anton Van Rooy and Vialzeva were reproduced in the Victor advertisements, but if the records actually were issued they have never been found. Furthermore, the Jewel Song from Faust, sung by Suzanne Adams, was listed by Victor as 5004 but, since the record itself is still missing, we can only surmise that it, too, was never released to the public.

The six titles listed here have in themselves little if any importance, but they do plug six gaps in the 5000 series, and we who collect recordings by the great singers of the past no longer need wonder what they were.

Most of the Red Seals in the 5000 Series were re-numbered in the 91000 Series, while some of the Black Seals were transferred to the 61000 Series. Many of the missing 5000 Series numbers have been found pressed in the blank space between label and grooving on editions in the 61000 Series. Therefore, if you have 7-inch and 10-inch black label, single-faced Victors bearing the "Angel" imprint on the back, examine the inner blank space for a 5000 Series number. If you find one, please write it on a postcard and mail it to me. Thanks!

Favorite Pioneer Recording Artists

Edward Warren Meeker. II.

By ULYSSES ("JIM") WALSH

That was always the secret of Meeker's success (humor). He had an excellent baritone voice, sonorous and resonant, but it was his highly developed sense of humor and knack of making people laugh that won him recognition as one of the prime favorites among Edison staff artists. As for Meeker's sense of humor, I believe I told in the biographical sketch of Dan W. Quinn how Ed, in the latter days of the Edison company, roguishly tried to convince the late Billy Jones and Ernie Hare that Mr. Quinn had made 150 or so cylinder records at one engagement — a clearly impossible feat. Mr. Quinn told me of the incident with great glee. It is sad to think that Meeker, Quinn, Jones and Hare are now all gone.

One of Edward Meeker's outstanding characteristics was his facility in dialect work and his acting ability, which made him the principal figure of many of the vaudeville sketches recorded for Edison by the staff organization which was known as the Empire Vaudeville Company.

Some months ago I outlined the career of George Washington Johnson, the first Negro recording artist, and told how his records were dropped from the various companies' catalogs after he had been hanged for the murder of his wife.

In 1917, however, Edison decided to reinstate Johnson's famous "Laughing Song," and Meeker was chosen to take the principal part in the new recording. The record begins with the members of an amateur minstrel troupe in despair because they have no one to sing the Laughing Song. Then someone remembers that "Meeker is in the billiards" room and he is called down. To me, he does a much better job of singing this hilarious ditty than poor Johnson himself did. Another famous Johnson number was the "The Whistling Coon." This also was revived by Edison at about the same time as the Laughing Song. The record begins with a group of soldiers singing and swapping jokes. Suddenly a nondescript Negro (Meeker) appears and when asked his name bashfully says he is known as "Whistling Pete." He is called on for a song and finally, after vain protests, sings and whistles "The Whistling Coon," being joined by the other member of the cast at the end. As "Whistling Pete" shuffles away, a bugler softly plays "Reveille." No doubt, Meeker's Spanish-American War and Camp Dix experiences were reflected in this arrangement.

It was not only in Negro dialect, however, that Edward Meeker, the ex-minstrel, was proficient. Some of his best Edison records were in Irish brogue. Two which have given me great pleasure are "The A. O. H.'s of the U. S. A." and "He's Living the Life of Reilly." In the busy war days, I told Mayor Earl Riley, of Portland, Oregon, about having the latter record. He was greatly amused and said that if he should again find himself in Roanoke he hoped I would play it on my radio program from Station WDBJ especially for him. His Honor indicated that, as mayor of the Pacific Coast's most congested defense area, the life he was living was by no means that of Reilly!

The Curious History of Music Boxes

By Mosoriak & Heckert

The story of automatic musical instruments, from their earliest conception down through the years to the invention of the phonograph, is authentically traced in this unusual book, that contains the description and interesting historical background of music boxes of all types, and illustrates many of the rarest examples. Some of these took strange shapes, such as the butterfly music box, or the musical pistol, and many others, and are pictured for the first time in this limited edition, which also includes a section on

CORRECTIONS

In the Historical Record Reviews that appeared in the February issue, there were three typographical errors which require correction:

1. The correct number of Marianne Brandt's Pathe cylinder of the Trinklied from Lucrezia Borgia is 19261 not 1926.
2. Heinrich Hensel was, of course, born in 1874, not 1847.
3. The Columbia originals of the Boninsegna arias were recorded in 1910, not 1919.

MUSEUMS

THEATRICAL HISTORY

A romantic and colorful period in Chicago theatrical history is recalled in a new exhibit of playbills and posters at the Chicago Historical Society. Programs from McVicker's, Hooleys' the Auditorium, and the Grand Opera House announce the appearance of many celebrities of the last half of the nineteenth century, including Edwin Booth, Adelina Patti, Nat C. Goodwin and Theodore Thomas.

Several programs dated 1857 commemorate the year the McVicker's theatre was built. The cost of the structure, $85,000, indicated the great progress of dramatic art in the West. Performances and performers contributing to the fame of this old theatre include "The Black Crook," 1867; Maurice Barrymore and the Polish actress, Modjeska, in "As You Like It" 1883, and Lily Langtry in "A Wife's Peril" 1884.

Brightly painted billboards advertising "On the Bowery," "Uncle Tom's Cabin" and "The Fast Mail" represent the melodrama which characterized this era in dramatic history.

In addition to the theatre program exhibit, the Society has recently opened a display of chromolithographs of American battle scenes in the Current Exhibit room on its main floor. These vivid prints were turned out by the Chicago firm of Kurz and Allison in the 'eighties and 'nineties. This display is on loan from the collection of Joseph T. Ryerson, one of the Society's Trustees.

Metropolitan Renders National Service

The Metropolitan Museum of Art, New York, now has over 14,000 objects of art on loan for an indefinite period to other museums throughout the country. Objects of very best quality are kept in the Museum's New York building. Loans are made from the Metropolitan's enormous stock of duplicate material and of works of considerable importance which the Museum is unable to show at all times. This hidden treasure has become a source of great enrichment to other museums.

Another important phase of the Metropolitan's program of spreading its material beyond its own building centers in the circulating exhibitions of the Lending Collection, reference being given to schools and organizations in the five boroughs of New York City and in New York State. Schools and colleges in the city alone now have 6,500 items belonging to the museum, including original material, reproductions and lantern slides, while schools and colleges in the state have another 1,800 items. Settlement houses, branch libraries, hospitals, welfare organizations and other museums in city and state have an additional 1,150 pieces. Furthermore, the museum is now circulating six exhibitions, each related to specific studies, through the city's junior high schools, plus a major exhibition on Chinese history and art that is now touring senior high schools. Loans are made only to public institutions capable of giving proper care and protection to museum property.

A representative collection covering the arts of Europe from the Middle Ages to the early nineteenth century has been lent by the Metropolitan Museum to the Museum of Fine Arts of Springfield, Mass. Springfield will keep the Metropolitan's loan of one-hundred-and-one objects for five years.

This is one of the largest such long-term loans of high-quality material that any American museum has ever made to another and is concrete evidence of the Metropolitan's newly emphasized policy of spreading the vast wealth of its collections, which cannot all be shown at one time in its own building, through the country, thus giving people of other cities an opportunity to enjoy works of art they might not otherwise see.

Diamond mines now use an X-ray device to detect gems stolen by workers. The ray makes the diamond glow green in the stomach if it is swallowed.

PRESERVING and FILING CIRCUSIANA

Part 1

By A. MORTON SMITH

A TWO-FOLD problem which eventually confronts every serious collector of circusiana is how to preserve his collection pieces in the most satisfactory manner, and how to install a filing system that will put every item at his fingertips when desired.

I doubt if any hobbyist in the circusiana field has made a greater success of preserving and filing his collection than Burtis L. Wilson of Chicago. Of circus pictures alone he has 35,000 and this is but one phase of his many-sided hobby.

Mr. Wilson for the past two years, was vice president of the Circus Historical Society, and because his vocation takes him frequently on long trips during which he contacts fellow hobbyists, he has been dubbed the "goodwill ambassador" of the Circus Fans Association.

Although his collection covers every phase of circusiana, his first love is pictures and during the early days of his hobby, he specialized in this field.

Mr. Wilson was a book collector before he turned to circusiana and he had only some 10 or 15 volumes on circus subjects, principally the works of Courtney Ryley Cooper, one-time Sells-Floto press agent, turned author. These were the nucleus of his circus book collection now numbering some 350 volumes.

In 1933, he went to Baraboo, Wisconsin, for many years home of the Ringling Brothers Circus, and with Mrs. Wilson, was escorted by the owner of the former Ringling winter quarters, on a tour of the grounds and buildings. As a souvenir of the visit, Mr. Wilson was presented a shield used in the Joan of Arc spectacle of the Ringling show in 1912 and 1913, his first collection piece in the circus field.

This item was shellacked to preserve it and the souvenir now hangs in the circus room of the Wilson apartment. During the Baraboo visit, Mr. Wilson made pictures of circus points of interest he inspected and stopped at a couple of shops to buy Ringling souvenirs.

Soon afterwards, he met Walter Scholl of Chicago, veteran circusiana hobbyist, and viewed for the first time, a circus collection. On September 1, 1934, he made his first trip to a circus as a fan and met executives and performers of Hagenbeck-Wallace circus at Elkhart, Indiana.

On this trip he hit upon the idea of specializing in pictures of clowns, taking them in each change of wardrobe and with props for each new gag, having in mind the development of a picture encyclopedia of modern clowns and clowning. The next step was photographing of family groups and circus troupes and this led finally to a general picture collection.

Mr. Wilson's circus negatives, taken on 828 size film, now number 5,000, each of which is placed in an envelope on which is typed the name of the performer, the title of the show, the date and town in which it was made. These negatives are filed alphabetically and chronologically in two sections in a filing cabinet. The first section is for individuals and the second for lot scenes, equipment, trains and parade pictures.

Mr. Wilson's picture collection proper is contained in 140 volumes of approximately 200 pictures each, and he has enough material ready for making up an additional 60 volumes.

He uses ring binders and 8½x11 inch heavy gray mounting sheets punched to fit, which he buys by the thousand. These pages will take any size picture up to 8x10, leaving space at top for caption, which he types in red on white paper and mounts above each picture.

Mr. Wilson explains that he mounts a picture in an album only when he has complete data as to name of show, the year the picture was made and the names of the people involved. If this data is incomplete, he keeps the picture in a box set aside for the purpose, awaiting identification.

The 140 volumes of circus pictures are divided into five general classifications. In the first group are between 35 and 40 volumes, which include lot scenes, parade pictures, animals, wrecks, fires, blowdowns and other catastrophes. The pictures are filed alphabetically by show titles and numerically by years. In this collection, some of the principal circuses are allotted an entire volume, while there are four volumes, containing approximately 800 pictures, devoted exclusively to Ringling Brothers and Barnum & Bailey Circus.

The second group of pictures are those of performers, exclusive of clowns and human oddities or sideshow freaks. These pictures appear in the volumes alphabetically by name of performer, with the names of the shows with which they were associated and the dates. Such artists as Clyde and Harriet Beatty, Terrell Jacobs, the Cristiana, Loyal Repensky and Davenport riding families have entire volumes devoted to their activities.

In the third group are the clown pictures. Mr. Wilson still endeavors to photograph each clown of the shows he visits each year in wardrobe and with his props. In addition, he buys and trades for other clown pictures in an effort to make this unit of his collection as complete as possible. He will soon have complete volumes on Emmett Kelly and Felix Adler, noted Ringling-Barnum clowns.

The fourth group of pictures is devoted to the sideshow attractions, filed under their professional names, and the fifth set of albums is for circus owners, executives, departmental superintendents, bosses, band leaders and agents. In this group, an entire volume is devoted to the Ringling family.

Mr. Wilson seeks one autographed picture of each individual and this particular likeness appears on the No. 1 page of the section devoted to that performer.

When the collector obtains panoramas and pictures larger than the conventional 8x10 prints, he mounts them on canvas and they lie flat on shelves in a steel filing cabinet.

The second part of this article will explain in detail how Mr. Wilson preserves and files his route books, programs, couriers, heralds and other memorabilia.

Surrey With the Fringe

The J. B. Van Scivers of Germantown, Philadelphia, Pa., employed this unique scene on their 1945 Christmas greeting. Mr. and Mrs. Van Sciver are seated in front and their son in the rear seat.

Auto History

The "Cycle and Automobile Trade Journal" of March, 1902, in describing the Clover Motor Vehicles, listed at 1847 N. Ashland Avenue, Chicago, Ill., shows a picture of the running gear and describes it as follows:

"One of Glover's specialties is a traction wheel for driving automobiles through snow, mud, or sand. This wheel is arranged to receive the exhaust from a steam engine or the cooling water from a gasoline engine. This tends to keep the traction wheel warm and enables it to grip the snow, which a cold wheel will not do. Thus a vehicle equipped with this traction wheel can be propelled in all kinds of weather. The running wheels can be removed and runners substituted therefore if desired."

The traction wheel as illustrated, was an iron wheel about in the center of the body, apparently the power was transmitted to this wheel, the other four wheels simply acting like the wheels on a buggy.

Perhaps Hobbies Readers Can Shed Light

Wonder how many present day auto enthusiasts remember, or ever heard of the Glidden Tours of the period 1895 to 1900?

This was an endurance contest for "gas buggies," and each contestant had to drive his car from New York to Buffalo. It was quite a social event, as well as the only publicized road test in those days.

The "Merry Oldsmobile," as pictured in song and fable, was the kind of car driven. They were frightful things in those horse days, usually painted bright red and with plenty of shining brass equipment. The driver and his passengers were decked out in driving caps, goggles, and big cuffed gloves, the ladies in flowing veils. All wore linen dusters.

The winner of the event was the car that reached Buffalo in the shortest elapsed time. As I recall, the 480 miles were done in six to seven days. Don't forget the roads were mere dirt affairs, and after a rain, wheels went in way over the hubs. Every car carried shovels and planks, and the farmers along the way always had a pair of oxen near each quagmire the day the Glidden Tour went through.

We kids always stood by the side of the worst turn we could find, hoping one of the 10 mile an hour speedsters would get into trouble, and stop so we could look 'em over even more closely.

—Grist, published by the International Milling Company.

In 1906-7 the Studebaker, Queen, Rainier, and Cleveland all had the same motor and chassis, all made by A. O. Smith Company, Milwaukee.

Did you ever wonder where the name Krit came from? It was from the name of the designer, Kenneth Crittendon.

Japanese Prints At Auction

When the Japanese print collection of Gilbert Fuller of Boston was recently put up at auction at the Parke-Bernet Galleries, Inc., New York, N. Y., it took an entire sales catalog to list them all. And despite the fact that one of the bitterest of all wars was recently waged between Japan and this country, the collection brought a total of $32,005 for 138 items, or an approximate average of $240 each. Mr. Fuller's foreword to the sales catalog is interesting, and reflects the devotion of the collector to his love. Mr. Fuller states:

"This collection was started in 1916. The larger part was acquired from 1919 to 1925 when business took me frequently to France and many of the most important European collections came up for sale. I was fortunate in being able to buy the entire Doucet and Rouart collections, retaining from them such prints as seemed to me the finest; and I was privileged to take my selection of prints from the Koehlin and two other private collections before they were offered at public sale.

"From the outset I aimed to restrict my collection to one hundred prints, all of which should be masterpieces. This ideal was never quite achieved. I have never been able to restrain myself to an even hundred. Nor are all of those exhibited here masterpieces, for I have occasionally succumbed to the lure, irresistible to a collector, of owning rarities.

"Yet this collection is the fruit, or possibly the flower of more than five thousand Japanese prints that have passed through my hands. It would be arbitrary to say that these were the finest of all; the selection I made was conditioned by the vagaries of personal taste. More safely, I can say that I had rather unusual opportunities for acquiring Japanese prints, and that this collection is composed only of those that seemed to me the loveliest and most desirable. I have tried always to make this collection a well-rounded one, with striking examples of the work of all the great artists, and in this I think I have not altogether failed.

"To me, the Japanese print has always seemed, of all graphic arts, the most purely musical. Collecting is only a temporary trusteeship of permanent beauty, and it gives me pleasure to think that others who acquire these prints may find in them the same singing qualities that I have found, from the springtime notes of Harunobu to the splendid discords of Sharaku."

The following selections are made at random from the priced catalog:

Hiroshige Signatures

Kambara. Scene of three men in a snowstorm at night, 9x13 $\frac{1}{2}$ ". Brought \$45.
Seba (Often written Senba). Showing a boat and a raft on a river, the full moon, etc., said to be one of the loveliest of Hiroshige's landscapes, 9 $\frac{1}{2}$ x14 $\frac{1}{2}$ ". Brought \$185.

Snow-Covered Promontories, 13 $\frac{1}{2}$ x9". Brought \$25.

Ohashi. The bridge in a sudden shower, 13 $\frac{1}{2}$ x9 $\frac{1}{2}$ ". Brought \$130.

Itabana. Travelers in snow on a road along the bank of a stream lined with pine trees, 8 $\frac{1}{2}$ x13 $\frac{1}{2}$ ". Brought \$120.

Hokusai Signatures

Salt-Maiden. Picturing a young woman elaborately attired, carrying two buckets suspended from a pole, in dancing posture under a pine branch on which hangs the robe of a court noble. She represents one of the two salt-maidens of Suma, where the courtier Yukihiro spent days of exile. On being recalled to the capital, he left with the salt-maidens his robe and his cap which each maiden in turn wore to appease her sorrow at losing him. Size 14 $\frac{1}{2}$ x10". Brought \$210.

Fuji from Gotenyama. Mt. Fuji seen from the hill Gotenyama where people are picnicking under blossoming cherry trees, 10x12". Brought $40.

The Great Tree. Mt. Fuji seen from the Mishima pass in Kai province, 9 $\frac{1}{2}$ x14 $\frac{1}{2}$ ". Brought \$95.

Mt. Fuji Seen Across Suwa Lake. Size 10 $\frac{1}{2}$ x14 $\frac{1}{2}$ ". Brought \$150.

Mt. Fuji Seen Across the Tama River. Size 9 $\frac{1}{2}$ x14 $\frac{1}{2}$ ". Brought \$145.

Sunset. Mt. Fuji in fair weather with south wind, 9 $\frac{1}{2}$ x14 $\frac{1}{2}$ ". Brought \$500.

The Great Wave. Mt. Fuji seen above the hollow of rolling waves in Kanagawa Bay. Size 9 $\frac{1}{2}$ x14 $\frac{1}{2}$ ". Brought \$1000.

Ariwara No Narihira. Farmer's family at work by a pond on which rest geese; a shrine and flying geese across the moon at back; commonly called "Imagery of the Poets." Size 20 $\frac{1}{2}$ x9 $\frac{1}{2}$ ". Brought \$280.

Mo Konen. Mo Konen (Meng Hao-jan in Chinese) was a celebrated poet of the eighth century in China, and the print shows him riding his horse in a snowstorm while on his way to the capital. Size 20 $\frac{1}{2}$ x8 $\frac{1}{2}$ ". Brought \$550.

Kwaigetsudo (Dohan) Signature

Standing Woman. Picture of a beautiful woman; she gathers up her dress in front with her right hand; the loose end of the left sleeve of her kimono is swung over her shoulder, date about 1713; said to be one of the rarest and finest of primitive Japanese prints. Brought $1250.

Kiyomasa I Signature

Nakamura Senya. The actor Nakamura Senya as Tokonatsu, the wife of Higuchi. A rare primitive, size 21 $\frac{1}{2}$ x12 $\frac{1}{2}$ ". Brought \$1000.

Kiyoshige Signature

An Assistant of the Forty-Seven Ronin. Pictures the actor Otomo Hirojii II as Amakawayu Gihel; the allusion is that Gihel, once shipping agent for the Daimyo Asano, Takumi, assisted the 47 faithful ronin, avengers of the death of their Lord Asano Takuminokami, by supplying them with necessary weapons, etc.; from the play "Kanadehon Chushingura." Size 25 $\frac{1}{2}$ x9 $\frac{1}{2}$ ". Brought \$30.

Kiyomasa II Signature

Primitive Bird Print. Pictures a golden pheasant on a pine branch, 12 $\frac{1}{2}$ x6 $\frac{1}{4}$ ". Brought \$350.

Toyonobu Signature

Reading a Poem. Pictures a yujo reading a poem written on a tanzaku, size 19 $\frac{1}{2}$ x7". Brought \$500.

Struggling Against the Wind. A young woman walking against the wind, shielding her face by raising a sleeve; a willow tree and a stream in the background, 11 $\frac{1}{2}$ x5 $\frac{1}{2}$ ". Brought \$400.

Harunobu

Girl on Flying Stork. A young woman on a flying stork, holding a scroll in her left hand and a hair pin in her right, 8 $\frac{1}{2}$ x10 $\frac{1}{2}$ ". Brought \$250.

Moso. A boy wearing a straw raincoat and hat with a hoe over his shoulder, discovering some bamboo shoots growing out of the snow, 11 $\frac{1}{2}$ x5 $\frac{1}{2}$ ". Has no signature. Brought \$30.

Plum Blossoms at Night. Pictures a young woman pausing on a veranda to admire plum blossoms by candlelight at night, 10 $\frac{1}{2}$ x8 $\frac{1}{2}$ ". Brought \$1400.

The Boy Peddler. A boy peddler of cool drinks, carrying two wooden buckets suspended from a pole over his shoulder, 11 $\frac{1}{2}$ x8 $\frac{1}{2}$ ". unsigned. Brought \$950.

DOLL-OLOGY

Dolls Take Leading Roles in Actress' Life

AMONG THOSE who lend charm and beauty, and genuine sincerity to doll collecting is Ann Thomas, talented actress of the stage, screen and radio.

Despite the demands made on her time by a busy career, she is never too busy to talk about her hobby. While Miss Thomas was in Hollywood to take part in the filming of Duffy's Tavern, she found time to visit many of the local doll collectors, and from the California shops, she took several additions to her New York City doll family.

The accompanying picture shows Miss Thomas with six dolls from her collection of more than 1000. She says that the portrait dolls of George and Martha Washington are modern characterizations. They have paper-weight glass eyes. Martha's are dark brown, and George's are blue-gray. The costumes she designed and created herself. That is a part of her doll hobby. She says she never just dresses a doll, but actually goes into research of the period in order to do a satisfactory job. George's vest is made of a lovely piece of silver brocade left from the costumes of the Paramount movie, "Frenchman's Creek." Martha's dress is gray satin, embroidered with tiny, pink flowers.

The tiny blonde girl with the fly on her stomach was brought from France about twelve years ago by a neighbor, Mrs. Anna Sproessig. She has fine wavy, blonde hair and a lovely painted face on the loveliest wax you have ever seen. The fly looks very real, as you will note.

These were part of the group of 59 dolls that Miss Thomas exhibited recently when she won first prize for the best collection, antique and varied, among stiff competition.

Miss Thomas is now appearing in Michael Todd's production of "The Would Be Gentleman," at the Booth Theatre, New York City. She is working on a doll, which is to be dressed exactly as she appears in the part of "Nicole," the comedy character from this old Moliere play. Karinska, the costumer has saved all the materials for her so that it can be exact. Her costume in the play was designed by the famous, Irene Sharaff, who has just gone off to Hollywood, to take her place at M.G.M. costuming the movie stars.

Miss Thomas has promised to introduce us to other members of her doll family when she has a little more time.

GRAINS AND GRASSES

By DOROTHY FOSTER BROWN

Buttons like these are often classified as "Wheat Buttons." I have no fault to find with this classification, which is descriptive and probably accurate, in most cases. But because I am not certain that I know wheat from barley (or rye, or even oats!), I consider it safest to include all such buttons under the heading of "Grains"—and then I can't go wrong!

Despite the complexities of present-day living, bread is still the "staff of life," and the grains which produce bread (and all other cereal products) retain their importance. They are as old as ancient Egypt and as new as your morning toast. On buttons, grains are decorative and interesting, even if (like me) you can't be sure which is which. Most of them are probably wheat, which is the most important.

No. 1 is a well-known Wheat design, often found in a larger version ("Button Parade", p. 56, No. 9), and also in Jet*. This example is brass with tinted background, tin back.

No. 2 is also found in several sizes and colors. It is a cone-back type, either one-piece brass or an excellent imitation thereof. The raised design, showing Wheat and Corn (?), is very graceful against a pebbled ground. Reverse: "Industrie Parisienne—S.—A."

No. 3 is a simple arrangement in one-piece pewter. The Sickle, being both significant and decorative, is often introduced into Grain designs.

No. 4 is a Vertical Hole button of Vegetable Ivory, with incised gilt decoration. Since Grass is Grain in miniature, and Grains are merely enlarged Grasses, it qualifies for inclusion here.

No. 5 is of bronze-finished brass, with raised design against a patterned background. I have seen this basic design in at least five renditions, including two different Hole buttons and a large brass button without the butterfly. The poppy head is presumably added because poppies traditionally grow in wheat-fields.

No. 6 is an odd old button made of black Composition, with raised design and self-shank. Some of the most effective Grain buttons show a single ear, like this, with or without beard.

No. 7—This button of flat, polished Jet has an intaglio design of silver and rose-colored lustre. Brass shank.

No. 8—The "Sheaf of Wheat" has long been featured in decoration because of its fundamental symbolism and ornamental appearance. Every collector is familiar with this black Plastic Horn button, on which the Sheaf is shown in relief against a background of very fine lines. It was made in several sizes. c. 1865.

No. 9 is of polished Jet, with the design painted on the surface in lavender, green and gold. Faceted border and self-shank. When found in good condition, such buttons are very delicate and charming. Unfortunately, years and wear tend to obliterate their decoration, so that many survive only as ghosts of what they once were. c. 1850-60?

No. 10 is a flat, one-piece brass button, with raised design against a pebbled ground. It displays a variety of grains and grasses, and is found in many variations. Some of these, made of brass and light metal, have a butterfly added. c. 1865-70.

A collection of Grain buttons can be stretched to include any Picture buttons which show gleaners ("Ceres", "Ruth Carrying Sheaves", etc.). It can contain a variety of "Sheaf and Sickle" designs, (see "Button Parade", pp. 26, 28 and 48); and any possible combinations of Grain with other things, such as Flowers, Anchor, Toadstools, Birds, etc. It could even include Poppies, if desired, for associations' sake! I have just remembered, too, that several State buttons—Ohio, Tennessee and California—show grainfields and sheaves. As always, ideas come with collecting, and every collector seems able to think of something new or different.

Since Button Collecting became so highly commercialized, much of its original charm and spontaneity seems to have departed. Buttons which were once available to all collectors are now inaccessible to any save the wealthiest; and many, many other buttons are in the hands of dealers, at prohibitive prices. This sad truth may be defended by some; personally, I deplore it strongly. But however it may be regarded, the fact remains; and many appreciative collectors now seek their pleasure among buttons of a more unassuming type. Such buttons, be it understood, are not inferior to the expensive types—they are merely less spectacular.

It is, and long has been, my intention to stress the attractions and possibilities of these buttons. I shall continue this policy, partly because I want to encourage average collectors (of whom I am one), and partly because such buttons really are fascinating and beautiful.

In a hobby like Button Collecting, it is not enough to admire rare buttons at a distance, in museums or in other peoples' collections. The hobbyist can keep actively interested only through personal participation. That is why it is better to collect unpretentious buttons than to mourn because museum specimens are unobtainable—and to lose interest in the hobby.

If you cannot collect hall-marked silver buttons, or "Washington Inaugurals" or miniatures on ivory—don't be discouraged. Start a Topical collection—like these "Grains and Grasses" for example—and see how much fun you can have. For remember: it is the personal enjoyment, relaxation or inspiration which each individual derives from the hobby that counts most. If personal pleasure is lost, the hobby loses most of its power and virtue; but if it is retained, the most unassuming of buttons are worth their weight in gold.

*When I use the term "Jet" in regard to buttons, I mean black glass, unless otherwise specified.—D. F. B.

ANIMALS OF ASTRONOMY

By JASPER B. SINCLAIR

(For you who collect buttons bearing the signs of the Zodiac)

Ancient astronomers kept our dumb animals very much in mind when they first charted the course of the stars and developed the study of the still mysterious universe.

Seven of the twelve signs of the zodiac were named after animals in the time of the astronomer Hipparchus, about 2,000 years ago. The English translations of the original Latin names are: the Ram, Bull, Crab, Lion, Scorpion, Goat, and the Fishes.

Variety was the spice of astronomy in those days. It is noteworthy, too, that no generation of scientists since then has ever come forward with a suggestion that the names of the zodiac signs should be altered.

LEO—THE LION

CAPRICORNUS—THE GOAT

PISCES—THE FISHES

SCORPIO—THE SCORPION

TAURUS—THE BULL

ARIES—THE RAM

CANCER—THE CRAB

The brightest star in the heavens is Sirius, more commonly known as the Dog Star—a name that it has retained since ancient times. It, also, gave name to the "dog days," a term applied by the ancients before the Christian era began.

The dog days were anciently a period of about forty days, the hottest season of the year, at the time of the rising of Sirius. Nowadays, they are counted from early July to almost mid-August, the dates differing from ancient days.

The sciences of navigation and geography often go hand in hand with astronomy. Thus, it is no surprise that two of the five zones into which the earth is divided take their names from signs of the zodiac. The Tropic of Cancer and the Tropic of Capricorn are literally the earth zones of the crab and the goat.

And old-time seafarers still talk knowingly about the "horse latitudes," an imaginary area of the ocean just north of the Tropic of Cancer and directly south of the Tropic of Capricorn.

Why and when they were so named is uncertain at this late date, though many a seagoing legend has been spun by sailors to account for the horse latitudes.

Out of THE BUTTON BOX

Mrs. Josephine L. Schuyler, Bloomsburg, Pa., has written to us in regard to a button pictured in the October issue of HOBBIES. Mrs. Schuyler informs us that this button, the lady in the moon, four stars and comet, was one of those she acquired as a girl for her button string seventy years ago. The 84-year old collector mentions that her string had 500 buttons, and is still in her possession. All of the buttons are older than seventy-one years—some definitely older than one hundred years.

CLUBS

The Rainbow Hobby Club of San Francisco, Calif., held its Christmas party at the home of Mr. and Mrs. F. H. Christensen, at which time the following officers were elected for the ensuing year: Mrs. C. J. Widmer, President; Mr. Gerardus Tyken, Vice President; Mrs. F. H. Christensen, Secretary-Treasurer; Mrs. Louise Leonberger, Press Correspondent.

Historical Autographs At Auction

Selections from a recent sale conducted by the Parke-Bernet Galleries, Inc., New York, N. Y.

A collection of 25 pieces of signed letters by William L. Garrison, C. F. Adams, Charles Sumner and others, in various sizes, brought $42.50 for the lot.

An autographed manuscript of "From the Persian of Nisami Word & Deed, by Ralph Waldo Emerson," written on 1 p., small 4to, consisting of 21 lines, about 125 words, brought $85. The translation of this first appeared in The Liberty Bell, Boston, 1851. The first three lines read: "Whilst roses bloomed along the plain, The nightingale to the falcon said, 'Why of all birds must thou be dumb?' " Three friendly letters, written and signed by Ralph Waldo Emerson, in all about 280 words, July 6, 1846; September 16, 1850; and November 23, 1864, brought $40 for the lot.

An autographed manuscript of "From the Persian of Hafiz. The Phoenix," signed by Emerson, brought $230. This manuscript was written on 3½ pp., small 4to, consisting of 13 stanzas, each four lines, and comprising about 300 words. The first stanza reads as follows:

"My bosom's phoenix assured
His nest in the sky-vault's cope,
In the body's case immured
He is wear of life's hope."

Two autographed letters signed, "O W. Holmes," to unnamed correspondents, dated November 8, 1860 and August 14, 1852, brought $15 for the lot. In one of the letters, Holmes refers to Thomas B. Aldrich's work "Pere Antonie's Date Palm."

Nine autographed letters signed by James R. Lowell, with initials, brought $50 for the lot. They were written to Edmund Quincy from Elmwood and Cambridge, June 12, 1848 to September 15, 1869. The letter dated June 12, 1848, is partly devoted to Zachary Taylor's nomination for President of the United States: "Is not Taylor's nomination disgusting? If the young Whigs... have any backbone there is a chance now for breaking up both the old parties..." In the letter dated February 25, 1868, Lowell refers to Charles Dickens: "Boz is coming on Wednesday Eve, the 26th of this month..."

Another series of nine letters written by James R. Lowell to Edmund Quincy on literary matters brought $50. These are dated from April 19, 1854 to October 19, 1858. In one of the letters Lowell writes: "don't I wish that I were just getting out of my first book—or my last? On the contrary I am making another article for Graham, & he wants another after that. I am as dull as a dancing bear & don't believe my article will be good for anything..."

That Lowell wrote quite a few letters to Edmund Quincy is indicated in another group of five A. L. S. in the same sale. This lot brought $42.50. One of the letters is written in Italian. In an undated letter Lowell writes: "After hanging over one like a nightmare, telling me to run & at the same time tying my legs, you have at last driven me to this. I stirred up the spirit with every pole I could think of, but it would not move. This morning grace was given for me, for I had not a moral poem 'on hand,' to write the enclosed love me, love my verses..."

A series of 12 autographed letters signed to Willis Nathaniel, also to Edmund Quincy, in the same sale brought $40.

A collection of 130 miscellaneous autographs, including a portion of a document, signed by John Hancock, brought $40.

RICHARD M. LEDERER, 285 Madison Ave., New York 17, N. Y. Wants offerings of checks, promissory notes, drafts, bills of exchange, or orders to pay made by Presidents, prominent old New Yorkers, Naval and Military heroes, signers of the Declaration of Independence, etc. Write for Want List No. 10. Also interested in mechanical banks. jly122952

AUTOGRAPHS BOUGHT and sold. Monthly price lists for sincere collectors.—Conway Barker, 4914 Alamo Drive, Galveston, Texas. ap3402

AUTOGRAPH QUERY

Did you ever hear of clipping autographs from photos before returning "approval" shipment? I think this happened to me but will not be able to prove it since I made no separate list of autographed photographs. You may have had other complaints, in which case you can mention a name and I can say "yes." Of course, you know the effect that this has. I just won't send any more shipments on approval.—Huston Mitchell, Alabama.

Robley D. Stevens, Baltimore, Md., autograph collector, has recently presented his collection of autographed photographs and letters to the Library of Congress.

RESTORING AND REFINISHING ANTIQUES

By JOHN RAMSAY

THE PROBLEM of restoring and refinishing antiques is important to every collector. Many enjoy doing this work themselves, but even those who prefer to buy pieces ready for use, or to have the work done by professionals should understand enough of the basic principles to know what they are getting. After all, few of the old-time artisans are left, and they and their successors, who may or may not be able to turn out as fine work, will naturally do less than their best if they know their customers will be satisfied with that.

Taking furniture first, since that is by far the most important, three basic types can be distinguished, early, "period," Georgian or pre-Georgian, the later Empire and Victorian, and "primitive" country-made or farmhouse furniture. Pieces of the first type are, of course, usually so fine, rare and valuable that the amateur lucky enough to acquire one "in the rough" would be wise to put it in the hands of a competent restorer of antique furniture. The last clause is important, because the most expert cabinet maker or restorer without experience on antiques can easily ruin one. Old wood acquires a "patina," a thin surface of dark rich color, valuable as a sign of age as well as for its beauty, which is destroyed by planing or too much strapping or sanding. Yet this is frequently removed, as seen in maple whose beautiful tawny yellow is scraped off to leave a raw cream, or obscured by stain or colored varnish. Pre-1800 furniture was not always varnished, and never heavily, yet the standard three-coat finish, often with a high gloss, is often applied by finishers ignorant of this fact. Repair and restoration, too, have their limits. "All original" Georgian furniture is not often found, but repairs should, as a matter of craftsmanship, be as inconspicuous as possible, and restorations, if necessary, should be simple and follow the original design. Such elaborations as inlay where none was before and returned table-legs and bed-posts are not restorations but come close to, if not over the line of faking.

The second class of furniture, Empire and Victorian, is more common, so less valuable, and can safely be refinished by the amateur. Here also there are a few basic rules, the first being the importance of thorough cleaning. Our ancestors had a very bad habit of re-varnishing or re-finishing their furniture every few years without cleaning off the old finish, with the result that six or seven coats are not uncommon—I once found a newspaper between the second and third. There are many ways of removing old paint or varnish, but paint remover, if slow "messy" and expensive, remains the best. The patina is still worth preserving, and lye will discolor and even burn wood, while scraping without paint remover is sure to take off much of the surface, and likely to scratch it badly. So any commercial paint remover applied in a thick even coat according to directions then cleaned off with a scraper or putty-knife, will eventually leave the wood clean. Usually, each successive coat of paint requires a coat of remover, and a curved grapefruit knife is splendid for turnings and carvings. Pieces of broken glass are good too, but the edges must be smooth, or they will scratch. A mixture of equal parts of wood alcohol, ammonia and water allowed to stand for a few minutes, then rubbed off with a stiff brush or coarse steel wool, is good for varnish, but useless on paint. Finally, after the remover has itself been removed, if necessary, by washing the wood with alcohol or gasoline, it should be rubbed down with fine sandpaper and steel wool until all scratches are removed, and a dull luster appears.

At this point, any repairs can be made. Chairs usually need regluing, table tops are warped, feet are battered or worn, or in general, "anything can happen." In fact, one of the commonest and most annoying problems is that of old and poor repairs which have to be done over. And the amateur will find it best to call in the professional cabinet maker for any but simple jobs until he has acquired experience enough for more difficult ones. But anyone can fill holes or cracks with plastic wood, or, with care, patch veneer. Even blisters in veneer can be removed by heating with steam—a hot iron over wet newspaper—and drying under weights. The iron and newspaper treatment will also remove dents which are not too old or deep. At this point, too, the wood may be moistened with alcohol or turpentine to show what its color will be when finished. Mahogany can be light or dark, walnut varies from yellow-brown to dark brown or even the red-brown of mahogany, and cherry can be brown or red. Patches and repairs should be tinted to match the old wood with commercial stain or oil colors in turpentine. A solution of permanganate of potash, applied with a rag, darkens mahogany; stain is good on walnut, but it is impossible to buy and difficult to mix a modern stain which will match the color of old cherry. It is rarely advisable to stain an entire piece, but poplar, whose natural color and grain are unattractive, can resemble cherry, especially in turned parts. Also, much of the furniture of the last half of the century was cheaply made, light and dark wood used in the same piece and stain improves this considerably.

All this means work, but a piece ready for refinishing is more than 50% finished. And there is considerable argument over this final step. The old school preferred an oil finish, innumerable coats of kettle-boiled linseed oil rubbed in at forty-eight-hour intervals, and maple, at least, really needs at least one coat to bring out its full beauty. But oil cannot be used on veneer, and the Empire and Victorian "parlor furniture" under consideration was originally varnished. So a coat of shellac, the brown, not the raw orange shade, diluted with an equal quantity of alcohol, followed, preferably, by three coats of tung-oil varnish, each hand rubbed with the finest grade of waterproof sandpaper and water to a dull smooth finish is best. But the workman's conscience is his guide, and one or two coats of a modern satin-gloss varnish may be satisfactory.

There is much more variation in "kitchen" or country-made furniture, so, of course, more problems to face. Repairs are almost always needed, and certainly a larger number of woods occurs. Much of this was made to be painted, and combinations of woods are common, particularly in chairs, which usually have pine seats, hickory rungs and maple legs and posts. Numerous coats of paint are common with the first, a filler practically impossible to remove entirely, the favorite barn or coffin red leaving a rather interesting tint, other colors less attractive. Naturally, any piece which has been painted and decorated should be restored to its original finish, if possible, but this is usually a job for an expert. And, also naturally, any really early "primitives," butterfly tables, Windsor chairs and the like, should go to an expert, who will understand the importance of refinishing so that the evidence of age, old tool marks, signs of wear and the all-important patina will not be destroyed. Less important pieces can be refinished at home, cleaned off as outlined above, although it is not necessary, or even possible to remove all signs of the hard wear most of them have had. The oil finish is completely appropriate, but it is slow and tedious. One coat of oil, or two on soft wood, rubbed down when dry with steel wool, will act as a filler. Staining should not be necessary, but when soft and hard woods are found together, the pine or poplar will absorb more finish, and so be darker than hickory or maple, and some oil color, usually burnt umber, mixed with oil and turpentine and rubbed in will match them up. Then two or three coats of shellac, applied very thin and allowed to dry for twenty-four hours, then rubbed down with the finest steel wool and waxed gives an entirely satisfactory finish.

Other antiques also need restoration and repair, but most are experts' work. Metals are easy, since most require only cleaning and polishing, but this means work. Iron, usually rusty, can be cleaned with a stiff wire brush, and a badly pitted piece should have a coat of flat black paint, rubbed off the high spots with sandpaper or steel wool, but covering the rust in depressions. Brass and copper can get very dirty, and a really bad piece should be handed over to a plating establishment to be dipped in their cleaning tanks. Others can be cleaned with a saturated solution of oxalic acid, steel wool, pumice stone and patience. The professional polishes metals, even pewter, on the buffing-wheel, a fatally easy and brilliant finish, but the collectors disapprove of buffed pewter or silver, and the hand-rubbed polish on any metal is preferable, if more difficult to secure.

An article on the subject was once titled "Refinishing Antiques is Fun." It isn't, but the time, patience and work entailed have their reward. The collector who refinishes his own antiques knows them better, and so appreciates them better, and, of course, also saves some money with which to buy more. The processes are certainly not difficult, and the underlying philosophy is simple. Every effort should be made to bring a piece back to its original condition, neither better nor worse, and the amateur who understands this can turn out as good work as the professional.

Cover

The collection of "Immortal Busts" pictured on the front cover of this issue belongs to Josephine Walsh of Los Angeles, Calif.

HOBBIES Magazine mothered this collection, it seems, for Mrs. Walsh says that she started the collection through purchases made from HOBBIES' advertisers when she lived in Illinois. She resolved at first that all of the specimens of her "Immortal Busts" assembly must be Parian, but like all collectors' intentions she deviated somewhat, and specimens include marble, Royal Doulton, and others. However, the largest number are devoted to Parian.

Mrs. Walsh prefers to collect her busts to represent all countries, but here is a good chance for specialization if the collector so desires, for each country is able to supply fine examples from all walks of life.

The Old Chuck Wagon

The chuck wagon was an integral part of the western tradition. It was home to the cowboy. The brand of his outfit burned on its side, its roomy bed held his bedroll and clothing. Around the campfire at night he sang to a restless herd and slept in the chilly air while coffee coals sparkled in the starlight.

The old vehicle was strictly utilitarian. A hinged cover opened from the top and a prop—usually charred with branding irons—formed a table. Crude drawers held tin plates, cups, knives and forks, salt, sugar and plenty of molasses, which the cowmen called "lick." Camp cooks followed different arrangements, but as a rule the bed of the wagon also contained a liberal supply of canned goods, beans, flour, slithers of bacon and an extra portion of lick and sugar.

Success of the wagon—and to a great extent of the whole outfit—depended on the cook. Usually a man of mercurial temperament, he nevertheless was a professional in his field. The cowboy demanded simple but tasty food. For example, sour dough biscuit: an ingenious mixture of sugar, salt and potato stirred in flour until the mass was full of air bubbles. Wild plum cobbler was a perennial favorite, particularly the buttered-sugar sauce with a sprinkling of spice. Son-of-gun stew, its suet and marrowgut seasoned in a big kettle, enabled a man to "set heavy" in the saddle.

"The wagon" long ago became a memento of the past, just as the open range gave away to an order of measured symmetry. It was a simple vehicle, but one which played its part in a time when men traveled great distances over lonesome lands and the frontier was forever away.

The chuck wagon belonged to a day of the lead steer, the outlaw horse and trail driver who were rooted to a land of breadth and charity.—Dallas News.

Death of Well Known Dealer

Thomas E. Blanchard, well known antiques dealer, passed away on February 2, after an eight month illness. He and Mrs. Blanchard were the original proprietors of Parmalee Hall, East Springfield, N. Y., where they conducted a shop for many years. Mr. Blanchard was the father of L. Erwina Couse, co-author of Button Classics. The Blanchards and Mrs. Couse are well known exhibitors at Chicago Hobby Shows.

WITCH BALLS

By THELMA SHULL

WHEN WITCHES played havoc with the everyday lives of our ancestors, a witch ball was hung from the ceiling in the attic or living room or placed over a glass bowl in the dining room to ward off unforeseen dangers that were believed to lurk around every corner. Strange as this may seem today, they believed in these magic charms just as many persons now think it is lucky to carry a rabbit's foot in one's pocket or purse.

One hundred and fifty years and more ago, witchcraft was practiced to interpret dreams; and woe be to the unfortunate person or household which the witch dreamed about unpleasantly, unless of course a witch ball was hanging in the house to counteract the effects of the dreams. These pretty glass balls, some transparent and light in weight, others profusely decorated and very heavy, are still in existence and are attractive to the collector of old glass. Witch balls were made in the eighteenth century and continued to be made and used until the latter part of the nineteenth century.

There are several types of witch balls, those of mercury glass, the striped glass or Nailsea type, the potichomania, and the clear or transparent colored glass, the latter often used as covers for bowls but perhaps thought of as having special antidotal properties by skeptical people. The Encyclopedia Britannica pictures a witch bowl with a large glass ball cover "to keep witches away." The pieces pictured in color are of blown New Hampshire glass, the bowl being opaque light green and the ball swirls of clear and opaque glass, a lovely combination with which to frighten witches.

Witch balls of mercury glass were made in silver color, in green, blue, gold, red, and purple. These balls have a metal cap at one end and a short metal wire used to hang them up. Reproductions of these old balls are easily distinguished by the smooth wire that is attached to them. The old ones have wire that is definitely four-sided, not smooth and round.

These old balls are very heavy for their size. Some of the smaller ones are used as Christmas tree ornaments, along with the silvered or purple bunches of grapes and blackberries. When the popularity of witch balls began to decline, the manufacturers no doubt sold them for Christmas tree ornaments. Some so-called witch balls have a short narrow neck, others are egg-shaped. The spheres were made as small as two or three inches in diameter, and as large as eighteen or twenty inches. The very large balls are sometimes drilled at both sides and have a metal chain through the center.

The potichomania witch balls, those decorated with dainty colored paper pictures similar to the miscellaneous cut-outs found in old scrap books, vary in size also, the larger ones being between thirty and thirty-three inches in circumference. Many people are puzzled trying to determine how these varied pictures of different sizes could be pasted so smoothly inside the balls, since these balls usually have an opening not more than one-fourth inch in diameter. The method of their making is of interest. Some were no doubt decorated by patient hands which pushed the pictures in, secured them with gum arabic, and then backed them with colored paint, swishing it 'round and 'round until the entire inner surface was well covered, so that the glass surface between the pictures was opaque. But others were made at the factory. They were begun as a ball of sand formed by mixing glue or some other sticky substance with the sand until it would remain in a spherical shape. The colorful pictures were then glued to this, pictures facing outward; and a ball of clear glass was blown around it. The pictures used in these potichomania balls were of children, birds, kittens, dogs, high top shoes, hands holding floral bouquets, etc. They are strongly reminiscent of the middle and later years of the nineteenth century. Since these sand-filled balls were very heavy, they were probably used more as ornaments in the parlor than as hanging balls.

There are the witch balls of clear or colored glass, often with a ribbed or fluted pattern repeated in the glass which imparts a scintillating quality when hung against a sunny window. Many glass balls were used primarily as covers for bowls or pitchers. Their value in warding off the spells of witches depended primarily on the view taken of them by their owners, the same as for the hanging balls. Those persons who were superstitious treasured their witch balls, even hanging one in the barn to keep away evil spirits from the livestock.

The small glass balls, usually a pale green in tint and full of sand bubbles, which are used as floats on nets in the ocean, are washed up by the tide and occasionally find their way into antique shops.

Perhaps none of the big glass bubbles mentioned here will keep the goblins away; but if one is hung in a sunny spot near a window, it will look simply bewitching!

GLASS FORUM

Pack Better Or Ship At Your Own Risk

READERS again urge us to take some more definite steps regarding poor packing of glass and breakable material. We agree fully. Something drastic ought to be done to stop careless and ignorant packing, or it is going to hurt the whole mail order business in antiques. These readers write us that the Express Company is threatening to accept shipments of antique glass only at the owner's risk. In our opinion, they would be fully justified in doing so.

How far HOBBIES can go is another question. We think we are doing enough when we tacitly guarantee the responsibility of our advertisers. We cannot require them to go to church on Sunday or keep them from playing cards on week nights. Naturally, we do not think we can be held responsible for all their careless packing. Yet, we are willing to do our share because we can see it is to our selfish interests to help. We are taking the matter up with the Railway Express Agency proposing that we join together to improve conditions. We will agree to refuse advertising from shippers where carelessness is shown, if the Railway Express Agency will at the same time refuse to accept shipments from them except at their own risk. This is doing our share, and it will stop it. Instead of condemning the whole trade we put the finger on those who definitely deserve it.

If you don't know how to pack, you have no business trying to conduct a mail order trade; and if just because you get your money in advance you don't care, you should not be permitted to engage in this business. Antiques cannot be replaced. Often when these fine pieces are broken, they are gone forever. We not only lose the intrinsic value of the piece, but this handiwork is lost to future generations.

The Plume Pattern

California.—The Plume pattern on the January cover of HOBBIES, and its story are very interesting. These will help to bring this pattern to the foreground. I would like to add that I have been collecting the red Plume pattern of glass for some time. I have goblets, cakestand, cream pitcher, covered sugar bowl and butter dish, spoonholder, and celery vase. On some pieces the red band is etched, others have the red band without etching. In each piece the plume is clear glass with the band above in red, with the exception of the cakestand. In this, only the plume around the edge is red, the other part being clear. On the creamer is "Merry Christmas, 1900." The goblets have a leaf design on the red while the sugar bowl has a Fuchsia and leaf etching. We enjoy using this glass, particularly during the Christmas season.—
Thelma Shull.

Reader Recalls Visit to Glass Factory Town in 1885

It was my privilege to spend my 1885 spring vacation in Clayton, N. J., near Vineland and Millville, both of which were glass centers.

Clayton was mainly a factory-owned town, except for the houses on Main Street, a wide residential street with comfortable frame houses, well set back with large front lawns, each with a full grown shade tree on the lawn.

The railroad station was at one end of the main street, the factory at the other; close to the station was the school with a large shaded playground. Half way up the street was the town hall with its bell for calling public meetings. It had one iron barred window for culprits. At the upper end of Main Street was the church, and nearby the factory gate.

The town was practically owned by the Moore Brothers, and was superintended by a Mr. Steelman, who so kindly gave me a guest privilege card to visit the factory.

Inside the factory gate, I recall, seeing first, a man in an all white uniform with a mask over his face and head, and dressed in an all white uniform which resembled the outfits worn by doctors and nurses in our present-day hospitals. He was pulverizing the ingredients of clay, sand and lime, used in the manufacture of glass.

This work was then considered hard on the health of the workers, as the dust affected the lungs, so wages were high.

I recall that everything was hustle and bustle in the factory. Boys were moving back and forth with little truck-like wagons, which were filled with partly-finished products.

Then I came to the furnace, a large circular affair with a curved top towards a chimney at upper outlet for draft. This furnace had about ten large doors, each about two feet square. They opened into a large fire of red molten glass. In front of each door stood a blower. By him was a small stand on which was a mold. His helper closed the mold at the proper time, and also broke loose the object blown from the blowers pipe. It was then given to one of the little carts and hauled off to be gaffered (I think it was called).

The blower had a long metal blowpipe. He inserted it in the mass of semi-liquid glass, red hot, and twirled the pipe until he had sufficient of the substance in a mass at the far end. Now it was ready. Quickly it was drawn out and placed in a mold which was clamped by the helper and the blowing began. This was very particular work so that no air bubbles would appear in the finished product to mar its beauty and shape.

The blower who interested me most was a middle aged man who was blowing five-gallon carboys, greenish glass. My how his cheeks swelled and what wind capacity he must have had.

My souvenir was a little funnel-shaped affair of white glass with a flat, thin glass bottom. They were fragile; when you blew gently in the funnel end, the air suction made a noise like flip-flop. These pieces were called flip-flops and some may be still be in existence.

The rest of the tour of inspection lead to the finishing department where necks of bottles were ground and smoothed, and where bottles were packed for shipment.

The factory was run on a co-operative or community basis. The general store handled most of the worker's wages and gave credit for work and charged all articles purchased there. It was a miniature department store.

If a workman wanted an article the store did not handle, a purchase slip was given him and it could be used in any of the large department stores in nearby Philadelphia. The article was shipped to the purchaser, and the bill went to the factory and was entered to the purchase account at the company. It was told that when the fires were put out at the factories in early June, each man was given an accounting of his earnings and purchases, for the season. The balance was either given him in cash or placed to his credit for future drawing. Many of the souvenirs put out at this factory were blown by the men on their own time, and so were some of the other pieces, which I have seen in homes of residents of Clayton, Woodbury and Collingwood, N. J.

Clayton, N. J., in the spring of 1885, impressed me as being a happy and prosperous place in which to live.

—Lydia W. Slocomb, Delaware.

THE RIGHT ATTITUDE

In reference to HOBBIES comments on returning articles bought, I believe the purchaser should have the privilege of returning promptly everything he buys. He should not keep it a week or more, but send it back by return transportation.

Formerly I sent glass on approval with no deposit, and often would have to wait weeks before I heard from it or got it back. Now I insist on cash with all orders.

In my letter to a new customer, I always state: "Return promptly for full refund all glass not perfectly satisfactory. It's the satisfied customer who gives you the repeat order and makes business a pleasure."

Another thing that my customers like is that I give references in my first letter.—Jane Haase, New York.

Cleaning Old Bottles

Question: How do you go about cleaning old glass perfume and wine bottles?

Answer: Muriatic acid will remove dirt and all foreign matter. However, sometimes material has been left in bottles that causes them to turn yellow. In that case, get 25c worth of oxalic acid at your druggist, put a few grains in water, and let it stand until the discoloration disappears. The oxalic acid bleaches the stain.

P. O. Box 1097

Providence, Rhode Island

A pair of exquisite Bristol vases, white with gold, in perfect condition. Beautifully shaped with graceful turnings above base, and short urn center, they are nearly 9" tall, these are a perfect pair of old Victorian vases. Price. $22.00

A gorgeous rose carved sofa in mahogany with a three scalloped back, and a serpentine front. This is a large sofa 84" long, each of the three scallops are elaborately carved, the two side ones with roses, the center one with wreath. It is a genuine old Victorian piece, in first class structural condition, but it should be recovered. Beautiful wood. 70.00
Beautiful scalloped two part dish heavily decorated with gold, center handle an immense gold lobster, body of the dish decorated with gold scrolled roses, very handsome and perfect. This is a large dish 15" long by 11" wide, a beauty! 25.00

A fine early lamp with a marble base fluted solid brass column and an old blown glass bowl 18" tall, all electrified. 16.00
A pair of magnificent mahogany ottomans 18 by 15 at base, 15 by 13 at top, & 14" hi. The bases are shaped and of the finest crotch mahogany. They have upholstered tops, at present covered with horse hair in very condition, but they would be superb with needle-point. This is the finest pair we have had in a long time. They are old and right. Price 65.00

A pr. of solid bronze nautical candlesticks, made of small anchors, the candle holders have the letters of the compass raised in the rim. They are stunning for that house by the water, or for that man who loves the sea. Price 12.00
A small square brass tea kettle that sits on a brass standard with a spirit lamp in holder below, all shined up and complete. Price 12.00

A small black walnut Victorian marble top table, with an oval top. Measures 18" by 23", and has been cut down to coffee table height. The marble is white and perfect and the table is now 20" from the floor, and the proportions are perfect. Price 23.00

A partial set of moss rose china consisting of 10 8" plates (salad or tea size), six deep saucers 5" across, two large 10" plates, without handles, but suitable for cake plates, and six butter pats. All the plates are gold rimmed, and except for a tiny time crack in one butter pat, the set is in fine condition. The colors are clear & typical. The set has an unknown mark, but it is definitely old. Price 15.00

A darling little cherry table with very delicate legs and a drawer and the original brass pull. Has a square top 18 by 18, and has been all refinished. It is old and beautiful. Price 30.00

A perfectly exquisite bowl, white outside, shaded shell pink inside, with large sprays of applied roses and foliage in pink and yellow with green leaves. Decorated abundantly on both sides with multi petalled blossoms and buds. The bowl is 7" long, and 4 1/2" wide. It stands on feet made of rose stalks and is 4 1/2" tall. There are some minor and unnoticeable petal chips but nothing that detracts from the beauty or value of the ornament. It is marked "R" and is doubtless Rudolstadt. It is beautiful. Price 20.00

Another stunning Victorian hall rack made of the finest black walnut with large mirror and shells for umbrella stands at each side. It is in perfect condition, and perfect for the Victorian home. Price 28.00

A very large oval deep, black walnut Victorian frame, stunning for a mirror. Overall measurements 38" long by 33" wide, opening measurements 33" by 28". This is a very unusual frame, in perfect condition, no liner, but it is the finest of wood, and absolutely of the period. 19.00

A sweet high handled cream pitcher decorated on rim and handle with pink luster, and with colorful enameled band around middle. This little pitcher holds better than 1/2 pint liquid. It stands on six little feet. It is perfect and old and graceful. Price 10.00

A grand Lincoln rocker, recently upholstered. Its a nice old mahogany one with good carving, and in perfect condition, very homey! Price 22.00

A nice four drawer pine chest, its an old one and it has been refinished and is in fine shape. Its about 39" long and the drawers are commodious, & its solid. Beautiful brasses 35.00

A ruby glass lamp overlay cut to clear with brass shaft and marble base, 11" tall, electrified. This is a beautiful lamp, not too old, but very beautiful shape and color. Price 16.00

A large extra fine Bisque slipper, surmounted by two exquisite cupids. The slipper is 9 1/2" long, beautiful pastel colors, very elaborate; and the finest workmanship. This is undoubtedly Dresden, of the old and best period, a treasure! Price 55.00

A pair of very large and heavy English brass andirons, handsomely worked shaft surmounted by large balls. These are lefts and rights, and the brass runs back to the large ball log holders which in turn are supported by heavy brass feet, giving these irons 3 feet. There is a spread of over 10" on the front carbide legs. The irons are 18" tall and extremely heavy and of course old. 50.00

A marked French demi-tasse, with en-crustated gold rim and three little gold feet, beautiful china, exquisite shape. 5.00

A marked Dresden demi-tasse, an early one with abundant floral decoration and gold. Price 8.50

American Glass

Its a fascinating field for collectors either the beginner, who has a lot to learn, the fellow who knows a little or thinks he knows a lot, or the advanced collector. Anyone of them will find it advantageous to deal with us. Remember our guarantee is back of every item we sell.

If you have an idea you cannot afford to collect early blown glass just eliminate any such impression. We have a number of interesting and desirable items typifying the craft of the early glass blower at prices ranging from $5 to $30; no more than is regularly paid for late pressed glass and Victorian novelties.

We have rarities for the advanced collector; one of the finest assortment of historical flasks to be found anywhere, low priced ones for the beginner & rare varieties & rare colors as well. In pressed table wares we always have a fine stock of the early patterns in fine flint or lead glass.

And Don't Forget

We have rarities for the advanced collector; earthen ware, beautiful burl bowls in many sizes and shapes, primitives and so on.

ROYAL DOULTON SHERRY DECANTER

Perfection in color and symmetry. Deep rich red porcelain base with gleaming silver for contrast. Rising from an oval base gently rounded flanks blend into the throat. The silver bound lip curving gracefully around the stopper to form the lovely silver trimmed handle. From the stopper with its silver disc around the throat and halfway down the sides spill, in all directions a profusion of natural size clover blossoms and leaves in cunningly worked, hall marked silver. The ht. 8 3/4", dia. 5 1/2". Mkd. Royal Doulton (Flambe). Proof. A quantity and quality of color that is rare indeed. $35.

TIFFANY CANDELABRA

A bronze pair with two branches each. Ht. 12 1/2", circular base, (5 1/2" dia.) inset with 16 beautiful rounded green stones, above these a 4-part pattern that flows upward to form the standard, from which the branches curve gracefully with a spread of 9". The candle holders are tulip shaped (3 1/2" hl., 1 3/4" wide), with 3 long orals of green stones to each holder. Holed edges. Mkd. Mnt. $30.

To make the Tiffany set perfect. A lovely Venetian vase in a lighter shade of green on a separate, footed, circular black glass vase. Overall ht. 14 1/2", dia. 4". Within a scintillated panel extending from base to lip, H.P. flowers in ivory and gold. Flower and leaves on back. The light, color and grace of the vase lessens the darker shades and greater weight of the candelabra. Proof. $12. The 4 pieces, $40.

STERLING AND PLATE

Gorham's Sterling tea or dessert set. Lovely raised Victorian pattern: 6 teapots, 6 teaspoons, made over 50 years ago. Initials. Perfect condition. In brocade silk lined case. Mnt. $20.

Shell Pattern: Silver on copper. A very lovely oblong tray, 13 1/2 x 21", with a wide border and 3/4" raised rim, very similar to the Hope pattern. The case beautifully inset. Monogram spot 7 1/2 x 3 1/2". On each corner center of border, and graceful, upward curving handles are the 8 finely embossed shells. A heavy skillfully wrought tray with orig. soft finish. Mkd. Federal & Co. Perfect. $60.

Reed & Barton, 11 1/2 x 16 1/2". Very gracefully curved oval with 7/16" ribbed rim. Mirrored perfection. Absolute mint. $24.

Oblong with rounded corners and 3/4" embossed border of flowers and leaves. ("B" in center, not deeply incised). B. Rives Sons Inc. 13 1/2 x 16 1/2". Heavy. Fine condition. $18.

Bellflower border (3 1/4") around this heavy oval tray gives it the necessary decorative value. Perfect mint condition. $20.

Reed & Barton, circular 12 1/2" dia., with 3/4" embossed rim. Perfect for a 3-pc. set or service tray. Good condition. $18.

Victorian card trays, both with decorated ball handles in the old, much sought for grape design. One a basket on 3 feet, with open work rim and sides of grapes and leaves. Cathedral painted on glass in base, 5 1/2" dia., 3 1/2" high. Mnt. $7.50. The other slightly oval (6 1/2") on 4 ball feet, wire type but with inner oval of grapes and leaves. Rose in center. Ht. 3/4". Mnt. $4.50. Both for $11.

MISCELLANEOUS

Ruth Webb Lee's "Victorian Glass," newest edition. Mint condition. $8.50.

Hat Pin Holder. H.P. pink roses and greenery. Signed. Proof. $3.50.

Mayonnaise Spoon, made entirely of M. of P. white translucent bowl and contrasting iridescent handle. Proof. $2.75.

"God Bless Our Home" in a gilded deep frame 2 1/4". Under the glass the silk in lavender, tan, green and white is skillfully embroidered on the buckram. The center an old fashioned cottage with lawn, trees and smoke rising from chimney. An old one but in perfect shape. $10.50.

PERFECT OVAL OF A MIRROR

Lovely frame of gold leaf, concave, curving away from the face giving it depth and charm. 18 1/2 x 21 1/2 x 2" deep. Many a belle in crinoline and hoop skirts, watched her reflection in this old looking glass. Flawless glass. $18.

French Sarcophagus Bon Bon dish in a rich cobalt blue background. Lovely scrolled and scalloped edge with gold. 4 daisies around border and a group of 5 in the center are gold with a touch of cream. 5 1/2 x 7 1/2". Proof. $8.

Pitchers: a Parian and 3 Staffordshires. The Parian 2" hl. with graceful rim has a pedimented background with raised pattern of white roses and leaves on both sides. Proof. $8. One Staff., 3 3/4" hl. has large head of billy goat with long whiskers and horns extending from under the lip to the back. Flowers and leaves in red and green on both sides. Blue circles around base. Proof. $8. The other 3 3/4" hl. with a bird on limb on both sides. Colors of red, blue, tan and green. Proof. $8.50. These 3 are old, unusual and rare. All 3 for $24.

Because of its height (15") this tall, attractive pitcher with very small lip, would make an excellent reading lamp. Base 6 1/2" dia., top 3 1/2" dia., sloping sides, nicely shaped handle. Highly glazed finish of deep rich brown at top and base shading to tan at center. Rim at base have 3/4" applied bands of blue and ivory. Dec. at center, same plus 2 medallions 3 1/2" and 5 1/4" deep. (1 tiny base chip). Different, decorative. Price, $12.50.

TRACY'S CHINA FILLER is a grey-white paste that becomes extremely hard when exposed to the air for a few hours. It requires no heat. It is unequalled as a cement for china and all ceramic ware. Tracy's China Filler can be used to build up missing parts such as handles, spouts, knobs, etc. It can be filed, sanded and machined. Repairs can be easily finished by blending oil colors with Tracy's china glaze.

Pairs English Bristol mantel lustres in pairs and singles. $65 to $125 pair. $20 to $35 each for singles.

A few rare pistols both American and European. Prices on request.

Large colorful Staffordshire figurines and groups. $12 to $24 each.

Large Staffordshire figures of horses with riders. $17.50 each.

Two fine English mahogany Hepplewhite chests of drawers with splay feet made before 1800. Prices on request.

Peacock feather fan, 20" over-all, bright colors, good condition. $3.

Footstool from Scotland, round in shape, 12" diam., beautifully inlaid, 3 porcelain feet, upholstered in brussels carpet, 6" tall, good original condition. $10.

Most unusual rosewood console table, size and shape of a regular card table, pretty console carved feet, raises and lowers, slides from side to side. Two lids opening at top, adjustable for reading. Imported from Scotland, usable but needs some repair. $35.

Pair of fine bell metal candlesticks imported from England, all polished ready to sell, average height 10". Pair $12.

Lot of 25 hand wrought iron fire tongs. $2 each. Stringed musical instrument, combination of harp and guitar evidently made during the Georgian period in London and bears the Patent No. 39. It is made to play in a standing position since it rests on a pedestal. Black and gold decorations in the Chinese Chippendale manner. Has the equivalent of the regular pedal half-note stops but are operated on this instrument by hand. Measures about 30" tall. Photographed upon request. $75.

Twenty-four merry-go-round horses in good repair. $35 each.

CHIMNEYS for student lamps in clear glass. Slim type that fits into 1 1/4" burner at base and 1 1/4" tall. $1.50 each.

Staffordshire dogs all sizes and coloring in pairs and singles. $35 to $45 pair. $12 to $17.50 each.

Pair portraits of Penn-Dutch man and woman. Colorful and interesting. Dark red upholstery on chair and curtains. Need some work done on them. Size of canvas 29"x36". $75 for the pair.

The Publisher's Page

We regret to have to repeat again that our subscribers should not renew through agents. We do not accept subscriptions through agents, either new or renewals. The magazine agent who represents other publishers has no right, either morally or legally, to assume to represent all publishers. They do nothing for us, and we do not care to contribute to their support. We have had repeated instances where these agents took money from our subscribers, knowing well they could not send it in and kept the money until the subscriber, after several months, finally demanded some evidence that it had been sent in. Then they got their money back. Even large department stores have been known to do this. It is very little trouble to sit down and write a check for your subscription. Or in cases where you do not have a bank account, it is just as easy to get a money order from any bank, express office, or currency exchange as it is to go to a department store or hunt up a magazine agent, and have them send in your subscription.

It does seem odd to us, however, that after we have warned our readers several times, they still continue to give their money to agents for HOBBIES subscriptions. You do this at your own risk, folks. Our subscription money belongs to us, and we insist upon getting it and will give you value received in return. You say that other magazines have agents, but hundreds of specialized magazines do not have agents. The big national magazines can afford to give commissions to agents because they make it up on a tremendous advertising rate. Our advertising rate is low, and besides, we want to keep ourselves more or less independent of the advertiser so that we can reject questionable advertising and afford to leave out advertisers who do not come clean with the readers.

Since the war, our mail has been full of letters asking if HOBBIES has started up again, or if we are now taking subscriptions. Thousands of people were deprived of HOBBIES during the war by these agents who told them that HOBBIES was out of business or no longer taking subscriptions. We did take it off the news stands to the extent of 17,000 copies a month, but we never refused direct subscriptions. We saved enough paper on this plan to take care of all the direct subscriptions that came throughout the war, and we never missed an issue. That will be surprising to some of you new subscribers who were misled by agents who knew better. They lied to you just because they did not make a commission, and you will probably remember that in your future dealings with them.

These agencies take 25% of the money, and we do not feel justified in allowing it. We have saved $20,000 a year by getting our subscriptions direct and saving the agents' commission. HOBBIES is a specialized magazine, and no agent ever turned a hand to promote it, because unlike general magazines, it is not wanted by everyone—just those who have a direct interest. They know of it and order it a long time before the agent even hears about it.

When everything else is going up, including the material you buy through HOBBIES, you may have wondered how we could afford to keep our prices practically the same or make only the slightest increase here and there. We have been able to do it by saving unnecessary expense such as agents' commission. You ought to appreciate it enough to help in this respect, as it is nothing out of your pocket. This coming year, paper will cost us at least \$250 a car more than last year. The mills will not make the lighter stock any more and have increased the cost $\frac{3}{4}$ c per pound. We are not putting that cost on to you. At least not yet. You have a year's subscription coming to you before we can increase your price. However, if inflation keeps on, there will be nothing for us to do but increase our prices.

We are fighting every inch of the way, doing everything possible to keep from doing this. Every man and woman who has any regard for the future of this country will do his share to ward off inflation at this time. Most people do not know what inflation is all about, but HOBBIES boasts of an unusually intelligent class of readers. You know the dangers ahead of us. Everyone should do their share to discourage price raising in every line.

From Santa Barbara, California, we received the following letter:

"I look forward to each issue of your magazine, both as a dealer and a collector. It is a course of study in itself. My only criticism is that it is received too late for me to take advantage of the items advertised. It would be swell if an arrangement could be made for a west coast edition to take care of this side of the continent, but that's asking a lot."

In the mail only the day before, from Massachusetts, we received the following letter:

"I get responses to my ad from California, Texas, and other western states several days before I get my magazine. Can't you get it to us earlier?"

Will someone tell us how to reconcile these two letters? We have this same thing come up repeatedly, and it would certainly take a Philadelphia lawyer to dope it out. We remember a while back that an irate subscriber in California cancelled her subscription and demanded her money back, because she could not buy everything she wanted, claiming she got her magazine too late. In the same mail an Ohio reader wrote that she had orders from California before she got her own magazine, and she was at a disadvantage in buying.

We did not bring about the sellers' market that exists today. If you keep trying, you will buy a fair average of what you order. However, you are just spiting yourselves if you get mad when a check comes back. If we had as little patience as you folks have, we could not get out HOBBIES, even today, eight months after the war is over. For four years we have had to use every bit of resourcefulness and ingenuity possible to get supplies and machinery parts to keep going. If we quit just because we could not get material the first time we tried, we would have been out of business a long time ago. But we had no one to whom to write a nasty letter.

When we were printing the February issue, the foreman came to me and said, "We only have partly enough cover paper to print the cover of this issue." I said, "There will be a couple of cases in tomorrow that may be enough to finish the job." At this writing, we have exhausted all chances to buy cover paper for the March issue, although we are amply supplied with book paper for the inside and have lately been able to get a year's supply of kraft paper for wrapping the magazine. However, many types of material are still short. We are hoping that we will be able to put some kind of a cover on your March issue, but we do not know from whence it is coming.

Now, you people must have patience. The demand for antiques is keeping up beyond anyone's expectations. There was a slump reported from everywhere in the shops over the holidays, but there was no slump in mail order buying. You must do like everyone else now. You must keep trying. If you order a certain number of items, you will get a percentage of them. However, as long as the sellers' market continues, that is no one's fault.

We note in an advertising publication that the Art News of New York with 35,000 circulation has increased its rate to $770 per page. HOBBIES has a larger circulation, every one fully paid, and our rate is $100 per page. Billboard, with approximately the same circulation as HOBBIES gets $350 per page.

While we have an army of two million men in different countries all around the world forcing "free speech" upon other people, why not be consistent and restore Father Coughlin's right to talk on the radio? We are not of Father Coughlin's religion and do not agree with all his philosophies, but like Voltaire, we would defend to the death his right to say it.

News From Washington

Ceremonies in connection with the first-day sale of the 5-cent Roosevelt memorial postage stamp, took place at the White House on January 30, at 12:30 P.M. Postmaster General Robert E. Hannegan sold the first sheet of this commemorative stamp to President Truman. The Postmaster General presented a sheet of the stamps to Franklin D. Roosevelt, Jr. who was the representative of the late President Roosevelt's family.

The American Airlines, Inc., has notified the Post Office Department that the first flight of American Overseas Airlines, from New York to Norway, Sweden and Denmark will take place during the first part of February. The flight is scheduled to leave LaGuardia Field, New York, and mail stops will be made at Oslo, Norway, Stockholm, Sweden and Copenhagen, Denmark.

Because of the indefinite date of departure, the airline, through its Philatelic Department, has made arrangements to service covers for collectors, who send their own covers or accept those that have been designed by the airline for this first flight. These latter show a modern Douglas plane above the world of today.

The total cost of each cover from point of origin to destination will be as follows:

ORIGIN	DESTINATION	COST
New York	Norway	50c
New York	Sweden	50c
New York	Denmark	50c
Norway	Sweden	45c
Norway	Denmark	45c
Sweden	Denmark	45c
Denmark	Sweden	45c
Denmark	Norway	45c
Denmark	New York	75c
Sweden	Norway	45c
Sweden	New York	75c
Norway	New York	75c

Service on the foreign legs of this flight, because of the time element, may be impractical from the standpoint of the collector. Therefore, American Airlines has set up a special Philatelic Division at 100 E. 42nd St., New York 17, N. Y., which will handle request from collectors. Checks or money orders should be made payable to American Airlines System. Cash

Postal receipts at the Philatelic Agency for the calendar year 1945 were nearly half a million dollars more than for 1944, according to figures recently made public at the Post Office Department. For the year 1945, the total receipts at the Agency amounted to $2,681,712.93, while for 1944 they were but $2,243,729.98, an increase of $437,982.95.

The following stamps were removed from sale in the Philatelic Agency at the close of Business December 20, 1945:

3c Susan B. Anthony Issue of 1936
3c Steamship Issue of 1944

The Post Office Department states that there were 864,236 stamps sold, valued at 25,927.89, at the first-day sale of the Texas Statehood stamp at Austin, Tex., on December 29, 1945. The number of covers canceled were 397,866.

A special commemorative postage stamp honoring the United States Merchant Marine was placed on first-day sale at Washington, D. C. on February 26. It is of the 3-cent denomination, printed in blue. Of the special delivery size, the stamp is arranged horizontally in a double line border. The central design shows a Liberty Ship unloading cargo.

Later Information On Roosevelt Collection

In Linn's Stamp Weekly

We have received many clippings from newspapers in all parts of the country which make vigorous complaint about the sale of the proofs, etc., in this collection. We still stand by our remarks as concerns the ordinary line of gift proofs that have been given out for years past by the Bureau, but we learn from clippings at hand that the Roosevelt collection is loaded with certain other items which in our estimation should not be sold or released to the public.

We refer to what is stated to be progressive die proofs of certain stamps, proofs of partially finished dies and the like. Material which under no circumstances ever should be left out of the Bureau.

The suggestion is made by some correspondents and in some clippings that an injunction should be gotten out against the sale of this part of the collection and that it should be returned to the Bureau or placed in the Hyde Park Museum. We can heartily agree with this suggestion, but who is there to ask for such an injunction.

Might we suggest that this would be a splendid place for the American Stamp Dealers Association to put in its ear in the interest of clean Philately. The American Philatelic Society or the Society of Philatelic Americans or even the Collectors Club of New York might take this step or one or more of the mentioned organizations might act jointly.

Here is an opportunity for organized Philately to show its strength and doubtless an injunction could readily be had if proper steps were taken.

Let this business be stopped now. How do we know that when the Ickes collection which also flourished during the Farley regime, comes on the market, that we will not be faced with a situation similar to this one.

COLLECT COVERS?

Collectors of covers will find us able to help them in many different ways. Three of these ways are:

1. COVER ALBUMS. Unavailable for several years, we can again offer a DeLuxe Cover Album, suitable for mounting 400 standard size covers (will hold covers of any size, of course). Overall size: 16½x10½ inches, bound in beautiful deep blue fabrikoid, containing 50 jet-black pages, interleaved with glassine and rounded corners, built to our exacting demands, this magnificent album will suit you to a T.

Price: $4.00 each postpaid
($4.25 west of Mississippi)

2. SPECIAL LOTS: Among our many offers is this intriguing one of 22 different cacheted covers for $1.00. Standard sized, neat, fine, clean U. S. first days, flights, commemoratives and navals are included in these lots. (No junk.)

3. MANY LISTS: We have various special lists of covers from time to time (as well as our 60 page Collectors Handbook which lists First Day Covers). Any of these lists will be sent free, gladly, upon request.

Comparison

The press has wrongly envisioned the comparative value and interest of the coming Roosevelt collection sale. This is neither the "First" collection in the land, nor is it the collection of the "First philatelist." Speaking politically, he was, of course, President, and head of the New Deal group of the Democratic Party. Philatelically, or by comparison, which comparison will inevitably be made, the collection and his philatelic knowledge were not only not "First" but maybe very far down the line of holding values and personal philatelic skill.

The Green collection is still unsold and will be in the philatelic eye all this year, maybe into 1947. That has returned already more than a million dollars in cash to his estate. Compare with the currently admitted appraisal of the to-be-sold material.

Appraised by Mr. Sloane of New York City, and at $80,000, and so stated in his article in Stamps Magazine. And between, that admitted "million and more to come" there are a number of other holdings, which run from a hundred thousand to more than the Green million.

Indeed, if we descend to statistical comparisons, one great collector gave to a European government material from his own collection that listed five or six times this $80,000 in known values at present prices. Let's hope fat Hermann didn't get hold of it along with several other such gifts in various continental spots.

Admitting that the accumulation appraised by Mr. Sloane is of interest to followers of the New Deals' head, it is still not "First" anything.

oOo

New Trends

It is of vital interest to teachers of school clubs, maybe I should say supervisors of High School Clubs, to know and appreciate the new trends. I said long ago, these were attributed to "Style." That is a poor word.

The average youth, up to the beginning of the draft period, was inclined to feel he was a super man if he collected plain and fancy U. S. and maybe British North America. He didn't want to play with Mexico, and while a few fell for British West Indies and fewer for Central America, along with their United States, these were the rare and unusually interested collectors who were guided from their parents' studies.

Since the draft, things have changed. Our sons, brothers, fathers and all the other relatives in that age group, (and a few girl friends, too) have been places, seen things, heard stories and seen people and life. They have been all over Iceland and Europe, Great Britain and North Africa, Italy and Central Europe, the over-run countries and the near East. Add to that Oceania, Australia and New Zealand, India and the Malay peninsula, China and some Japan, and back home—Panama and Canal Zone, plus Hawaii.

And these spots interest the ones who have returned, and intrigue the ones who didn't get to go.

Why not start now to group and cover the countries that have the urge of sight, habitation and communal interest? Why not be really "good neighbors" and add South America?

Perhaps the High School teacher supervising will be glad to omit the super specialization and discussion of Georges' hairdo and his toga button and such, and in its place put some real observations as a teacher of world facts. We must be of the world, and for the world and maybe we'll have to do some world policing later on, looks so.

If the boys and girls have had such relations with our forces, help them keep it up. Help them to select, study and evaluate the countries we have been forced onto, or into. Approximately, 50,000 British brides should indicate to some of us that our men have got well acclimated in Great Britain. More brides come from other countries, too.

Their sons and husbands and the collectors they are bringing up will be glad to think of the spot where "mother" came from and why "dad" or "brother" picked her as a mate. And all this will also change the collecting interest of the Club (High School or lower) or just the town group; and they'll have enough material to give a real show—enough knowledge to make meeting programs varied and of material interest—and enough maybe to teach them moneys, locations and physical facts. And maybe give them a source of supply as well as a far off relationship with other lands. And it is all right here, and this is the time to strike the present interest, and drive a nail in the collecting bent before it shrivels up and gets back to "U. S. & B. N. A." only.

oOo

Paper Shortage

The paper shortage still upsets many of our youthful collectors. It has been suggested that you wait, preserving the accumulations in some form of stock book or card, and that finally there will emerge buyable supplies, at living prices, and you can then mount and embellish and write up your country, maybe big brother was there and will help you, but anyway, delay won't hurt, it will give you some money to put into hole pluggers and rarities. At the end you'll have your new area well housed and pretty fit to display.

SAMUEL COLT LIVED IN TEXAS

The Frontier Times of Texas prints the following letter from Harry Traynor, Texas.

"I have gathered in the past twenty-five years information that leads me to believe that the first six-shooter was invented right here in Texas by one Samuel Colt; that is, I mean that such a gun was first modeled here in Texas, at the old town of Lamar, Aransas county, about ten miles north of Rockport, the county seat. Aransas county was formerly a part of Refugio county, and not until 1874 was it partitioned out by legislative act and became Aransas county.

"I was a resident of Aransas county many years, and still maintain my home there, at Rockport, where I spend most of each week. I have for some 38 years been much interested in the development of the coast area, as was my father before me. Many years ago I had occasion to know several old pioneers, men who were then up in the eighties, and who were raised at Lamar, among them John Brundrett, Byrnes, and others, men whose word was impeachable. These pioneers handed down information to the next generation, and this information was that one Samuel Colt arrived in Lamar in the late 1830's and joined the settlers. The story comes to me that he assisted greatly in warding off the Indians who were at that time dangerous and numerous. Skirmishes were frequent, and two girls were kidnapped and in the later years were recovered from the Indians. Colt himself entered into these fights, being a young man with a lot of courage, fresh from Hartford, Conn. It seems that the best gun they possessed was a one-shooter, taking lots of time to load and fire; whereas the Indians could shoot many arrows in the same space of time. Colt conceived the idea that he could invent something that would shoot several times in order to overcome the advantage the Indians had, so, with such crude appliances he could gather up at an old blacksmith shop at Lamar, went to work and designed the six shooter, but due to the lack of proper material and mechanical skill in that section he had to take it to Baltimore or Hartford, where he perfected it. Some of these men knew him in person and described him to me as bewildered. It seems that at one time a brother, James B. Colt, joined him down there.

"Some years ago I had an occasion to block up considerable land around the old town of Lamar for an oil corporation, and I found that Samuel H. Colt as well as his brother, bought considerable land there, and had many land transactions. I observed that the deeds were signed and executed largely at Hartford, Conn., the seat of the Colt's Manufacturing Co. in those days but now it is termed Colt's Patent Fire Arms Mfg. Co., an immense corporation, which I think has long since passed out of control of the family of Colt. The old blacksmith shop at Lamar is now in ruins, but has been pointed out to me many times.

"Some years ago I communicated with the Colts people at Hartford, and received a special airmail letter from them requesting me to give them certified copies of the land transactions of Samuel H. Colt and James B. Colt that I could procure. This I did and they wrote me that this was startling information to them. They stated that Samuel Colt did disappear for some years in the late 1830's or thereabouts, embarking on a boat supposedly going to India, but just where he went their records did not show, nor did any of his descendants have any information about where he went. Piecing this together, the conclusion is reached that he must have landed somewhere around Galveston or lower down on the Texas coast, or maybe at old Lamar, where he was seeking adventure. Just how long he remained down there, or how many trips he made to and from there we have no way of knowing.

"Before writing the Colts people, I came to San Antonio and called on Potchernick's, who operated a large gun store here, and asked them for a catalogue, which they readily gave me, of the Colts Manufacturing Co., this catalogue showing a picture of Samuel H. Colt, and giving a history of their guns, etc. Later I received from the Colts' Manufacturing Co. a book covering the evolution of their guns. They thought the gun was first modeled at Baltimore, and later taken to Hartford. I had considerable correspondence with L. Barton Wilson, advertising manager for the company.

"Since my correspondence ceased with the Colts Manufacturing Co. I have learned from very reliable sources that in the San Antonio Public Library there is a book called 'Lamar's Papers,' and in this there is an article stating that Samuel H. Colt appeared before President Lamar and endeavored to have the Republic of Texas to take over his patent but was not successful. This book is in six volumes I understand, and each volume contains about 500 pages. I have not had time to go to the library to see this book, but hope to do so later."

Tax on Machine Guns

The U. S. Commissioner of Internal Revenue has issued warnings to veterans returning from abroad that the possession of machine guns brought to this country as souvenirs is illegal unless registered with the government as provided under the National Firearms Act. The law requires that the machine guns be registered. Ownership cannot be transferred unless payment of a $200 federal tax is paid. Violators may be required to pay a fine of $2,000 or five years or both. This bit of news will also interest the stamp collector. Firearms stamp, Scott's No. RY3, is provided for the payment of this tax and its high price will no doubt make it appeal to collectors of stamps. The color of this special revenue stamp is blue.

NUMISMATICS

NUMISMATIC THOUGHTS

By FRANK C. ROSS

Tejas - Tecas - Texas

Read your coins. The lettering and designs on our commemoratives contain a tome of interesting historical reading. The Texas Centennial half dollar, 1934, is one of our most beautiful commemoratives. Texas is of special interest to numismatists. When Texas seceded from Mexico and became an independent republic, it printed paper money of its own, but, unlike most newly organized countries, it did not mint any metal coins. It depended almost wholly on Spanish doubloons and pieces-of-eight for its coin currency. The Texas paper money has become a scarce item, but can frequently be seen in coin exhibits at the big coin conventions. The Republic Texas is one of the very few independent nations that left to posterity no footprints of its history on a coin.

The very origin of the name Texas is a subject of controversy. The most commonly accepted explanation is that it was the Spanish pronunciation of a Caddo Indian word, Tejas, meaning friends or allies. The tribe of Tejas Indians had a considerable degree of civilization. D. W. C. Baker, in Texas Scrap Book, 1875, said: "Some writers assert that Texas was so called because its supposed discoverers found the dwellings of the inhabitants to have roofs, which, in the Spanish language are called 'tejas', or 'texas', and hence the name. Others seem to find a solution of the difficulty in the assumption that the word 'tecas,' in the language of the aborigines meant friends. Another hypothesis, which is probably the true one is that 'tecas' was used as an affix to names of many provinces to denote their inhabitants; as: Cholula, Cholutecas; Tlaxcalla, Tlaxcaltecas; Mexico, Mextecas—so to TEXAS."

Skin Money

We usually think of money in terms of metal coins and paper notes, but this is, in a way, an erroneous conception. "Money is", using the man-on-the-street's definition, "anything we can spend". In the early days, on account of distances, lack of transportation and communication, each state was, in a measure, more like a separate nation, and modeled its currency to fit its own conditions. In 1784-1785 the people of that settlement now known as Tennessee organized the State of Franklin (Frankland), and on account of a scarcity of circulating currency passed laws to meet the emergency. "More than twenty articles were valued and declared legal tender, among them were raccoon skins, deer skins, beaver skins, fox skins, bacon, and rye whiskey". The governor and other state officers were willing to "take their own money", for their salaries were payable in skins instead of coins and paper money. The annual salary of the Governor was 1,000 deer skins and that of the Chief Justice 500 deer skins; the Secretary to the governor received 500 and the Treasurer 450 raccoon skins, while the Clerk of the House was paid 200 raccoon skins; County Clerks, 500 beaver skins; Justice fee for signing warrants was 1 muskrat, while the Constable serving the warrant received 1 mink skin as fee; Members of Assembly received 3 raccoon skins per diem.

Lexicology-ing

There is a vast difference between the beautifully engraved notes of today and the crude, odd looking Colonial notes (Revolutionary period) of the states. The difference in the wording on the notes stand out most noticeably. For instance, many of the old notes read "this indented bill." Instead of the familiar "according to the act of" some of the old notes read "agreeable to," with one reading "agreeably." On some, instead of "according to a resolution" we find "voted by Assembly," or "by Provisional Congress." One note we find "Resolution" shortened to "resolve." Some use the spelling Intitle, others Entitle. One reads "this bill shall pass current," another "this bill is emitted by law." In one instance, Commonwealth is two-worded into Common Wealth, and one New York bill uses Commonalty. One syllables money as moneey. Instead of the customary abbreviated A.D. many of the notes use the long term Anno Domini. And instead of the word "Dollar" of our present day notes, on the Colonial notes the word "dollar" is seldom used, the denominations usually being given in pounds, shillings, pence, and Spanish Milled Dollars.

Yet, the paper bills of 150 years hence may appear as strange in comparison to today's notes as do present day notes do to the Colonials.

Natural Beauty

Japanese history is full of legendary lore, and its currency full of exceedingly interesting numismatic specimens. Coin collectors are familiar with the symbolic flower of the Emperor, the sixteen petaled white chrysanthemum, and wonder why the Flowery Kingdom, with so many beautiful flowers to select from, chose this plain white blossom. If collectors had read their Japanese monies as assiduously as they appraised their premium values they would know the answer.

The story is that a famous horticulturist lived and conducted a flower farm near the Emperor's capital city. This gardener discovered two chrysanthemums in his fields, one white and the other yellow. Enchanted with the yellow one, he took it to his house and Burbanked it into a large, many-petaled, gorgeous yellow blossom; to him it was the masterpiece of floral beauty.

The Emperor sent an emissary to this famous flower home to select for him the most beautiful chrysanthemum he could find for a crest for his coat-of-arms. The emissary was shown the beautiful many-petaled yellow blossom, but to the surprise of the famous horticulturist it was turned down as not befitting the Emperor's crest. On his way home the emissary spied a plain, sixteen-petaled, white chrysanthemum growing wild in a field. This plain white flower in all its natural beauty appealed to him. The Emperor, too, was delighted with it, and no succeeding ruler, so far as known, down through the ages has ever discarded it for another. And that, according to legend, is the reason for this Japanese imperial posy.

oOo

Pieces of Money. The substitution of the word "piece" for "coin" is very common. One cent piece, five cent piece, fifty cent piece, etc. This is probably an evolvement of the oft repeated statement in the Bible of payment being made in "pieces of silver."

oOo

Et Tu Brutus. A commemorative coin to the assassination of Lincoln bearing the motto "Sic semper tyrannis" would be too gruesome to even contemplate. Yet the assassination of Julius Caesar by Brutus was memorialized on a coin struck by one of Brutus's commanders, 44 B. C., showing a liberty cap between two daggers, and the inscription "Eid. Mar.", (Ides of March), the day Caesar was stabbed to death.

RECOLLECTIONS OF AN OLD COLLECTOR

By THOMAS L. ELDER

COIN COLLECTORS' QUIZ

Beginner. "What does it mean when a catalog describes a coin, worth at least $60."

George. "That means it is the cataloger's idea of value or what he wants bid on the coin."

Beginner. "Well another catalogue lists a coin with $40 after the description. What does that mean?"

George. "It may mean little or nothing; it may merely be the cataloger's idea of its value, without having reference to any catalog."

Beginner. "Should I soak my cents in oil or kerosene?"

George. "There is a difference of opinion, but I say no, nor should you polish or clean a cent. A harmless way to help remove a spot or discoloration would be to put over the cent a little piece of absorbent cotton soaked with alcohol and let it soak over night. That should not hurt a copper coin. The late Henry C. Miller removed a spot from a bright red half cent of 1796 in that way I remember."

Beginner. "Is it safe to keep a $1,000 coin collection in one's home?"

George. "No, not unless the collection is insured. It is ridiculous to worry over any idea that an insurance company of reputation would not pay a valid claim for loss of such a collection by theft, and the rates are not exorbitant. The writer believes in insurance and has always carried all kinds, even hold-up insurance. It relieves one of worries."

Beginner. "Did you ever hear of a really big coin robbery?"

George. "Sure. The Wormser robbery on Fifth Avenue, the Kohler robbery at 70 Fifth Avenue, which resulted in the shooting and killing of a thief, and the Chapman holdup and robbery, were shining examples. The Chapman robbery of coins including a $10,000 stamp collection was up around $20,000 in value and no trace was ever found of the thieves."

Beginner. "How do you wrap up coins to protect them?"

George. "Some used brown square manila envelopes. Wm. Hesslein used common toilet paper to prevent discoloration. A concern in New York sells paper which it is claimed will prevent coins from tarnishing."

Beginner. "I am receiving many sale catalogs. Is it possible all these coins and lots change hands at these auctions?"

George. "There is no question but that in these times of multitudinous bidding most of the lots offered change hands. Of course, there's nothing to hinder a cataloger buying a lot, himself, which is underbid or not bid on at all."

Beginner. "What was the very first sale where U. S. coins were sold in special groups and arranged in proper form?"

George. "The Bushnell sale, the first big sale, held in 1878 by S. H. & H. Chapman of Philadelphia, pioneers in catalog arrangement of coins for auction."

Beginner. "What were the largest of the old sales?"

George. "The Clay sale about 1860, the early Levick sales; the W. Elliot Woodward sales of 1863 to 1880; the Jos. J. Mickley sale of 1867, and later the Cleneay, H. P. Smith, Stickney, Zug, the Parmalee, Jno. C. Mills, the Zabriskie, Earle, Jenks, Mougey, Wm. H. Woodin and others valued at from $10,000 to $75,000 each."

Beginner. "How many collectors do you suppose there are today?"

George. "Surely more than 100,000 against 5,000 in the old days. Of course, these are not all big collectors today. Some collect only one line like a set of small U. S. cents."

Beginner. "Does coin advertising cost much today?"

George. "No, when costs are considered. Remember what typesetting, cost of paper, and what general expenses of the printer are today as against 1904 when coin catalogs cost 75 cents to $1 a page for the typesetting. It's a different story today. Now overhead takes more than ever, and it is bound to increase."

Beginner. "Where did Elder hold his first sale and when?"

George. "At Pittsburg in 1903; that is nearly 43 years ago. The sale, although small was successful. About all the owners of the material and the bidders are now dead and gone."

Beginner. "Who is the oldest coin collector in the U. S.?"

George. "I'd like to know myself. I know of one, General C. Mc Reeve, who at last reports was alive, and 96 years old. Dr. Green of Westchester, Pa., was 103 when he passed on. You see it is hard to kill these coin collectors, as they seem to be tough. Green rode a bicycle at 98 and 100."

Beginner. "What is the oldest Numismatic society?"

George. Two claim it, the Numismatic Society of Philadelphia, and the American Numismatic Society each founded about 1858."

No More Cheap Gold Tokens

Inflation, the price of gold, cost of workmanship, together with new taxes have put an end to the production of gold medals and tokens for moderate cost.

And there is now a 20% government excise tax on production of all gold medals and tokens. The first Lincoln token issued by the writer in 1910 through the Medallic Art Company was sold by me at $2.25 to $2.50. Such a token if produced today would have to sell for six dollars or more in order to make any profit for the seller, which means that no more small tokens in gold will in all likelihood be issued by anybody. Besides we live in a day of strikes, and there are other obstacles to kill initiative. In spite of the great so-called "war prosperity" it is believed about 85% of all corporations including small business failed to make a profit in the last two or three years. That picture is not so rosy, and not a good augury of things to come.

Two Coins Sell For $7,500 Other Sales

A St. Louis dealer reports two sales: first, an 1815 half eagle sold for $4,000, and second, a Russian pattern ruble of Constantine sold for $3,500. Very respectable prices. But the recent sale price of $210 for a brilliant perfect proof gold dollar of 1875 is certainly not high and its price is not keeping up with other prices. In the same sale an 1857 S. mint gold dollar sold for $47.50, a very good price, and an 1859 D. mint dollar sold for $67.50, also a very good price for this date and mint. I regard the 1875 gold dollar as away behind the market for other similar rarities. The coin should bring not less than $300 on account of its rarity and the fact that no set of gold dollars is complete without it any more than is a $3 set without an 1875 which sells over three thousand dollars today. Chapman asked $75 for one 1875 dollar with a hole in it, and only fine condition, 25 years ago, which indicates its rarity and value. I have reports from several dealers telling me that both one and three dollar gold coins are very scarce with prices advancing fast for both issues.

WEBB'S COIN AUCTIONS by Mail

have been issued regularly every other month for many years. In each booklet you will find about $20,000.00 worth of the finest coins it is possible to buy. No cheap or very common material is listed, unless it should come as part of a collection I have agreed to sell. My terms are 10% on all Uncirculated or Proof U.S.A. coins, All Gold, or any rare coin that sells for $25.00 or over. Write first what you have to offer and condition, as much of the time I have a waiting list. Liberal cash advances if needed.

Announcement

After years of pleasant relationship with the Numismatic Fraternity as a dealer I have sold my entire stock.

I wish to express my sincere gratitude to the many customers, dealers and numismatic publishers who have vested their confidence and business with me.

I desire to acknowledge the deep appreciation I have come to possess of the high integrity of the collectors of America.

I have not lost my interest in the Numismatic field and shall continue as an ardent collector and hoarder in a small way of worthwhile material. Again thanking all and with best wishes.

Miscellanea

"Money is something you can buy something with" is what the boys are saying as they return from Africa and the Pacific Isles. They have learned the hard way that barter-and-trade is not obsolete, that coins are only a highly developed form of barter and trade. The natives prefer our candy bars and cigarettes to nickels and dimes. The natives want to trade, not buy.

oOo

Team up and you go ahead, solo and you lag behind. Form a Coin Club. Never before has coin collecting enjoyed such popularity. A Club gives one an opportunity to discuss his hobby; keeps him advised as to what is going on in numismatic circles; increases his knowledge and broadens his horizon. Instead of a smattering knowledge he becomes a coin specialist. A Club is always on the job, no off days, no temporary or prolonged quietudes. To Club members:—this word of advice to you, let your efforts increase so the absentees now across the seas will have something nice to come home to.

oOo

The Smallpox coin. Some of the early rulers washed their copper coins with silver and passed them as silver coins. Vain-like they made their portrait the most prominent design on the coins, and when the thin silver coating wore off it first showed on the face of the ruler, making the face look pock-marked. As soon as the pock-marks appeared the coin was past passing and comes down to us in its pock-marked form.

oOo

One of the tricks of the war trade is for the invader to counterfeit the coins of an invaded country to shake the people's faith in their currency. Collectors will have to scrutinize their foreign monies following wars. Even at that a counterfeit war coin will be an interesting memento of a certain phase of the war; it will have a sort of historic interest that will make it a collection piece.

oOo

Beginners should not invest too heavily in their first choice of phases to collect; go slow until you are sure you have found the right one. As the Villager says, "Love at first sight usually ends with divorce at first sight."

oOo

There are more coin collectors than collectors of medals, yet that doesn't prove that medals are not as interesting as coins. As the Spearville News says, "there are more autos than locomotives, but that doesn't prove that the majority is always right."

oOo

About all that can be said of a man who collects old coins just for the profit there is in it, is that he reduces the number of old coins at large. Like Austin V. Butcher says, "about all that can be said for some husbands is they they reduce the number of old maids."

oOo

Make your Coin Club the community Clearing House for things numismatic; it is as much your duty to dispense information as to collect coins. Before paying a fabulously high price for a supposedly Confederate half-dollar, just remember that there were only four of them struck and only one known to exist. There were about 500 restrikes of this famous coin, and the chances are 500 to 1 that the coin offered you is a restrike, if not a counterfeit.

oOo

The exceedingly great beauty of the ancient Greek coins was not so much the superiority of workmanship of the old designers and minters as it was to their not being handicapped by so much "conformity." Nowadays the designers have to conform to thickness and evenness of coins, and have to include a lot of lettering that hinders artistic effect.

oOo

When you say a "piece of change" or a "piece of money" you are talking numismatically. A "Piece" is an old English coin, worth 22 shillings, says Bob Ripley. —Frank C. Ross

INDIAN RELICS

ALONG THE TRAIL

By R. B. BERNARD

I just returned from an interesting trip through Nevada and Oregon. The total of my Indian purchases is one buckskin shirt: this, in spite of the fact that I was in Indian country much of the time and contacted Indians, also collectors and dealers.

Saw and chatted with some Indians who would fit right into the movie conception of an Indian. The men wore buckskin moccasins, levis, usually a buckskin vest or sometimes a blue jean wind breaker, ten gallon hats with beaded bands, sometimes a bead necklace and their hair in long braids. The women wore moccasins, gaudy colored dresses, and all the beads they could secure.

My wife wears a rather nice Pomo Indian bead necklace and she had several offers from the Indian women. We stopped to chat with one group of women but the husband stood aloof; very much the proud, inscrutable Indian. We later learned that he was the Reservation policeman, and that probably accounted for his demeanor.

I had several bunches of Indian beads which they wanted to purchase, but as I only took them along for trading there was no deal.

Called on several Indian friends. One, so far as I know, is unique among Indians. She weaves baskets for herself and buys those of other neighboring tribes for own collection. Will neither sell nor trade. On one trip I tried to induce her to sell me one that she had woven. She refused but told me that if I would bring her some from the other tribes she would trade. The following year I took a number of baskets, and as it was a camping trip it was some time before I reached her home. Meanwhile, they had to be unloaded and loaded at every stop. When we finally reached her home and she had looked them over carefully she finally decided that she could not part with any of hers. She and her husband own a nice ranch overlooking Lake Almanor in California and raise stock and trout for market.

Stopped in at another friend just in time to witness something that I'll never forget. The Indian is much interested in studying the old Indian ways and handicrafts and always has some old item lying around. He had recently run across a beautiful pestle, 20" long with phallic carving. As I drove in he was just completing the job of chipping down that carving so the pestle would have a uniform taper. A rare and beautiful specimen absolutely ruined.

I find it increasingly difficult to procure anything from the Indians. The majority of them, especially the younger generation, do not want to appear interested in "old timer" things and often disavow knowledge of them even though they may own them.

Natchez Sweating

DUMONT DE MONTIGNY, whose Memoires historiques sur la Louisiane (Paris, 1753) are cited by Dr. J. R. Swanton (Bulletin 43, Bureau of American Ethnology, Washington, 1911, p. 85), has this to say concerning the unusual sweating process for healing by the Natchez Indians of Louisiana, who numbered 3500 in 1698, but are now extinct.

"The Spanish beard, that moss which grows on the trees and of which I have spoken elsewhere, is one of the remedies which they employ oftenest in their cures. They make use of it principally in cases of sluggishness, lassitude in the limbs, cramps, and even internal disorders, and here is the method which they observe in these maladies. They first have prepared in the cabin of the sick person a bed raised about 1½ feet from the ground and different from others in that the canes with which it is covered instead of being close together are fully an inch apart. The savage physician then spreads the moss or Spanish beard over this bed to the depth of from 7 to 8 inches, after which, having made the sick man lie down on this mattress entirely naked, he covers all his body with the same moss, so that only his face appears. Then these alexis put burning charcoal under the bed which they smother with herbs which they have boiled and surround the bed with coverings. The smoke of these herbs passing through the moss excites in the sick person an abundant sweat, for it may be said that they are not at all sparing, and that they make him sweat in spite of himself and to excess. Moreover, when he comes out of this bath they have no need of towels to wipe him. The corner of the hand performs that office and makes rivulets of sweat run over his entire body. If after this remedy the sick person is not at once absolutely cured, he at least receives much relief and ordinarily some days afterward he recovers his health perfectly."

BEQUEST

Radio soundman Tommy Evans of Chicago should be the envy of most Indian relic and folklore devotees because when his friend Chief Black Eagle, Custer's Indian scout, died some time past, the famous Indian left Mr. Evans' many prized Indian possessions. Among the collection of bonnets, bone vests, peace pipes and tomahawks are two medals, one of which reads:

"Presented to Cornelius Johnson (Chief Black Eagle's American name) by U. S. Grant, June 17, 1876."

The other inscription reads:

"God bless you, my child, forever. Presented to Cornelius Johnson by Queen Victoria in London, England, April 22, 1885, for best Indian acting."

Mr. Evans, a native of the west, is an accomplished rope expert, wrangler and bronc buster.

TRANSLATION

In one of the issues of HOBBIES, I read a letter about a reader's various translations, etc., of the Lord's prayer. In looking over my Indian legends, I came across one translation of the Lord's prayer from the Mohegan Indians and one original from that of the Picuris Indians. These came from the Annual Report 43 of the Bureau of American Ethnology, Smithsonian Institute, Washington, D. C. The Mohegan translation reads:

"Great Father staying in heaven. Very great is your name. May your heaven come. Likewise as is your command, so may they say here on earth, as it is going on in heaven. Give (us) today bread, so, too, for another day. Make my heart so good that I may not like evil things, because yours is heaven, yours is strength very good; that is forever and forever."

Translation by Fledelie A. H. Fielding (Mohegan).

Original in DeForest, History of Indians in Connecticut, Page 39.

The translation is not given for the Picuris prayer.—W. C. Carrington, Colorado.

MYSTERIES

By LOUISE SMITH

THE NEXT time you decide to kill rich old uncle Horatio or the saxophone player on the next corner, take a tip from Bill Smith of Minneapolis and don't use a gun. Guns, according to Mr. Smith are much too messy, and are too easy to trace. No, the easiest way to do away with your victim is to push him off a cliff—provided, of course, you have no witnesses, and a handy cliff.

Mr. Smith, who works in the credit department of the First National Bank, bases his opinions on his large collection of mysteries. Having collected the books for over ten years, he now has more than 600 spine-chillers. They range in type from Gypsy Rose Lee's "The G-String Murders" to "The Leavenworth Case" which was written by Anna Katherine Green in 1878. Mr. Smith keeps a list of authors and their books, and also takes a few notes on books he likes, good plots, good motives, and good murders.

A judicial use of poison in rural areas, where specialists are not available, is most effective. In fact, Mr. Smith believes that there are many more cases of this type in real life than anyone realizes. Overdoses of sleeping medicine can be administered very easily and without too much danger of detection. Hunting accidents are also acceptable and a sharp knife can work wonders when used in the dark.

Mr. Smith started collecting mysteries when he inherited about 30 of the books from his father, and his collection has increased rapidly since then. Each Christmas brings a new lot from his family who are delighted to have "something to give to Dad." During the rest of the year, he adds to his collection from time to time. Lately he has added many of the pocket mysteries which have become so popular in the last few years. Another source of books is a rental library in St. Paul, which calls him each time a sale is held, and lets him pick out anything he wants before the sale starts.

The shelves in the Smith living room are crowded with bright covered books bearing titles such as "Death for Dear Clara." Tables in the room always have one or more of the books on them, usually the ones with the weirdest pictures on the cover.

Mr. Smith enjoys writing down his impressions of his books, and he has two loose-leaf notebooks for this purpose. In the notebooks he has a page for each author, and on it he lists the man's books, and checks those which are in his collection. In another section, he writes reviews of many of the books, pointing out good and bad points. There is also a list of plots, of good motives, and another of types of characters.

His hobby is mainly for his own enjoyment, but it has a practical purpose, too. Some day, Mr. Smith hopes to write mysteries of his own, and when that day comes, his careful notes will be a great help. Like any hobbyist, he has definite ideas about what is good in the field. His favorite author is Rex Stout, because, as he says, "I read my mysteries for entertainment, and if they are not clever and bright, I don't like them. I know when I pick up one of Rex Stout's books, that I'm going to like it. The dialogue is good, and the action moves smoothly. Then, too, I like Nero Wolf and Archie, Nero's a swell detective and Archie makes a perfect foil for him."

Most mystery authors have a favorite detective, who takes the lead in many of their stories. Mr. Smith likes Agatha Christie's Hercule Poirot about best. Poirot is very conceited, but his "little grey cells" usually give the reader a good story. Other detectives who rate high on his list are Dashiell Hammett's Nick Charles and Sam Spade, and George Harmon Cox's Kent Murdock.

Many top-notch mystery authors have one specialty which makes their books outstanding. For instance, Mabel Seeley is an expert at providing atmosphere for her crimes. She spends most of her time building up a creepy tension which increases as she goes along. On the other hand, Frank Gruber specializes in fast action and his books move too swiftly to waste time on atmosphere.

Agatha Christie rates high on Mr.

Smith's list of favorites because she invariably has such good plots. Dorothy Sayers, whose "The Nine Tailors" is Mr. Smith's favorite mystery, is, to him, the greatest stylist in her field. Another author whose writing he admires is Van Wyck Mason, who writes exceptionally smooth stories.

Naturally, there are some types of stories that he doesn't like. "I particularly dislike books that have an exhaustive use of time-tables—the kind of plot where you spend hours with the detective trying to figure out from three time-tables how the murderer got from London to Wales, traveling the last 15 miles on a bicycle."

Authors who spend their time rehashing the clues annoy him, too. This, to Mr. Smith, shows a lack of material and planning. Anything dull disappoints him, as do books that take their time about getting anywhere. A mystery, even more than any other book, must move rapidly from start to finish.

There is a constant group of new authors being introduced now. With so many mysteries being published in the pocket books, there is a greater demand for material than ever before. Among the more recent authors, Mr. Smith likes A. A. Fair, James Gunn, and especially Jonathan Latimer, whose "Headed for a Hearse" and "Murder in the Madhouse" come up to many of the older writers.

For anyone who wants to build up a collection, or just read for pleasure, Mr. Smith recommends some of the older books which are by way of being classics in their field. Agatha Christie's "The Murder of Roger Ackroyd" is an old standby and her "Easy to Kill" is excellent, too. Raymond Postgate's "The Verdict of Twelve" has an unusual angle, and if you like the "not for children" variety, Peter Cheyney's "A Trap for Bellamy" is outstanding.

One of the most unusual of the modern authors is Elliot Paul. His "Mysterious Mickey Finn" is peopled by some of the weirdest characters in any of the modern mysteries. This is one author who, as Mr. Smith says, a reader must have a definite taste for, but he can't be overlooked.

There are many mystery authors, and there should be one to suit every taste. So if any reader of today who is dissatisfied with the current crop, will wait till tomorrow, he may find one that he likes. And if he finds an author who writes clever, bright, fast-moving stories—without a trace of a time-table—it may very probably be Bill Smith.

Therapeutic Treatment

Maine—No one can imagine what HOBBIES means to a person who really needs something to keep his or her mind occupied. My start as a collector began with postmarks with stamps on them and was started when I had a severe nervous breakdown and could do nothing else. Then I started buttons and that has been a great help.—Mrs. Josephine B. Stone.

A Buyer's Directory

Illinois—The recent months have brought many HOBBIES readers to visit me, and we all have agreed that HOBBIES is the link of fine friendship.—Alice Daye.

Thanks

New York—It must be a great source of satisfaction to you to know that you have contributed more to develop a love for antiques and a code of honor among antique dealers than any man in this country.—Dr. Joseph Nagel.

Brings Too Much Business

Michigan—Business is so very good, that my strength is not equal to the demands.—Eleanor Gage.

Long Life Ahead

Iowa—I am a HOBBIES subscriber and enthusiast and have found both pleasure and profit in it. Hope you and HOBBIES will flourish for a long time to come.—A. Hunter.

When Help Was Needed

California—Many friends have shared the copies this year, and I am sure the pleasure received from them have helped many of us over a trying period in our history.—Helen M. Lane.

They're Coming Our Way

Virginia—Words cannot express the enjoyment I get out of HOBBIES. It seems the only thing that was untouched by the war, outside of the splendid editorials by Mr. Lightner. Too bad more Americans can't read your book and get to see the light of day as he sees it.—Mildred H. Pfaff.

We Can't Make Them Include Prices

Virginia—It has become a "must" item with me. I enjoy the magazine thoroughly, though I find a few dealers never answer an inquiry, regardless of stamps sent. Suggest that the magazine make it a rule to have all dealers include prices in their ads. I've lost a number of good buys simply because I waited to hear price of a similar article. I see no reason for their withholding prices because if it is more than the collector can afford, he won't purchase the article anyway and both parties have gained nothing.—C. A. Sutphin.

Keeps 'Em Busy

Missouri—I received more than 500 pieces of mail as a result of my ad in the last issue, and am seldom less than a week behind answering mail.—J. D. Miller.

"Buying at Auction"

Illinois—We enjoyed Mr. Lightner's interesting book, "Buying at Auction," so much that when we had finished reading it we decided to send it to friends who are confirmed antiquers. They will, no doubt, get as much enjoyment out of it as we did. It will probably recall some of their experiences in Chicago and New York in buying at auction. Mrs. Peters says you all but named certain dealers, as she feels that she could recognize them. Please find enclosed remittance for another copy of the book.—John F. Peters.

Naturally, a Kansan

Kansas—I enjoy nearly every department of your very fine magazine, and above all the Publisher's Page.—Mrs. W. M. Lovett.

Right You Are

Maryland—Please renew my HOBBIES subscription for another year. Under existing conditions I consider this a privilege, since HOBBIES Magazine seems to be one of the few worthwhile things left for us that hasn't been shipped out of the country.—W. R. Shaner.

Keep Trying—You'll Get Your Share

South Carolina—Business must be flourishing everywhere. Each month I order many things from HOBBIES and nine times out of ten my money comes back with the notation, "Sold!" I order by airmail the day my magazine arrives. Anyway, occasionally I get ahead of the other fellow. Mr. Lightner's page is superb. The editorials are well worth the enclosed $2.50 if I never succeed in getting the china and glass I want.—Mrs. H. Babcock.

They're the Pick

Oregon—Enclosed please find renewal of your interesting and charming magazine. Have bought several articles through HOBBIES ads and found the advertising firms both courteous and reasonable in prices!—Esther Edge.

Can Still Buy Some

West Virginia—I get so much pleasure from HOBBIES, it would be a big disappointment to miss even one copy. You are doing a grand job, and HOBBIES fans appreciate it. I like everything about the magazine. My doll collection grows in spite of high prices. However, I find that lots of dealers haven't put their prices out of reason of small collectors.—Helen Curtis.

No Riff-raff

Colorado—Enclosed please find payment for advertising renewal. While I do not get so many answers from this advertisement, they are mostly good customers and that counts far more.—H. I. Garratt, Ute Stamp Co.

Careful Packing

Indiana—I enjoy reading HOBBIES. I say amen to the editorial note about careless shipping. I am just now going through the claim process of parcel post breakage, and it's a nuisance that could have been avoided if the sender had taken five minutes more to pack carefully. She has her money so "why worry" seems to be the attitude.—Mrs. Walter J. Horst.

Does Its Part

Delaware—My husband and I enjoy your magazine so much. We feel that it is the only magazine that makes the home look like home.—Mrs. Omar Boulden.

Hobby Helps

California—I find your publication the greatest help and inspiration to me. Hobby work is a great pleasure and a means to keep one out of the cocktail "parlors."—W. R. Humphries.

Brought Good Business

Pennsylvania—We are so grateful for a magazine such as HOBBIES, and in our home it is a household word. We are grateful, too, because HOBBIES has carried our little business of selling old things through its first year in a manner nothing else could have done. So on the brink of starting the second year, we salute HOBBIES, its staff and everyone straight down to Tuxedo, the office cat.—Less and Jess Brown.

In Bad Company

Oklahoma—Of all the magazines I think HOBBIES is the most interesting. It is the only magazine that ever kept me up until two in the morning.—Clarance L. Johnson.

Dog Ran Off With Money

New York—There is a note of explanation due you, I think, to accompany this renewal of my subscription: I went out to our corner box to mail it in the teeth of a northeast blizzard today, and the wind whipped the envelope containing my husband's check and your reminder notice right out of my hand. I pursued it, of course, and a neighbor's extremely ill-mannered dog thought it was a game, grabbed the letter, and raced up the hill. When he condescended to return, the letter was missing, and no amount of search revealed it, so I am enclosing a duplicate check and the name stamp from my last wrapper to aid you in your renewal of my subscription. It is just possible that someone may find the letter and mail it; if so, just extend my subscription another year. My husband and I both enjoy your magazine very much, but wish you had more articles on clocks and dolls in it. We miss Collins' articles. I have five excellent Italian crèche dolls a soldier sent me from Naples, and if I can get a good clear picture of them, will send it to you with a descriptive article. I agree with your other doll-fan readers that a complete doll number, such as you had in November 1939 (?), would be a grand idea. Would it be possible to devote every other number of your magazine to a different hobby? Such as the former January issue for clocks, then a general issue, then the March issue for dolls, then a general issue, and the May issue for glassware, etc.? Maybe it would call for too much expense but it would be grand, anyway. Do keep up the good work, and if my own poor efforts could help in the formation of a doll number, please let me know.—Mrs. R. T. Lieb.

He's in the Dog House if it Doesn't Come

Kansas—Enclosed is my check for $2.50 for which please extend my wife's subscription to your magazine for another year. I hope this check arrives in time. If not, please advise where I can obtain a comfortable dog-house for my own use. It need not be an antique; a new or used modern one will suffice.—Mr. Geo. H. Brown.

Good Contris

Iowa—You are a busy man and I will only take a couple minutes of your time, to say: 1. That I have enjoyed greatly the editorial page in your HOBBIES magazine. As a life long Republican I feel that you have certainly hit the bull's eye every time. 2. That your MUSIC department is being conducted to complete satisfaction. I am very interested in phonograph records, and feel that all of the fellows who have been in charge of this department have done a grand job.—J. W. C. Hesser.

BELLS

Glad Am I for Chimes

(By Millant Taylor in the Christian Science Monitor.)

Fortunate the child enriched by an awareness of the sound of bells—at all times. In many an American town or city so few are the bells that probably most children today seldom think of them, and their parents are in the same state. Become conscious of the voice of bells and you ever rejoice to hear them.

Before the war one of the special treats of the traveler in Europe was the glorious chiming of bells and playing of carillons from world-famed towers. Whenever I read, now, of an official protest lodged against the Nazis for removing the bells from some occupied town, I know that among the details of the postwar settlement must be the return of all bells possible. An Old World without bells seems an anachronism.

Looking back to days in Europe, it seems as if we were always listening to bells. There were the bells in Antwerp, whose notes remained elusive no matter how closely we tried to con their pattern, and whose beauty of tone lingered to haunt the memory. There were bells in Bruges, in Brussels—all beautiful in that little country of singing towers.

There were bells just beyond our window in Florence—Italian bells, which we could see plainly in the open lantern tower of the fawn-colored church. A man and a group of little schoolboys rang them in a disorderly series or peals, the schoolboys jumping up to swing on the rope in "Hunch-back-of Notre-Dame" style. A gay sight and sound.

In Oxford, we would manage to be near Christ Church College just in time to hear Great Tom boom out his 101 strokes which signaled the nightly closing of the quadrangle gates, I can almost hear Great Tom's hum notes yet, echoing among the colleges. There was a Great Tom at Lincoln, too, and a Great Peter at York. I wonder if our British friends are hearing them this week end. Big Ben, on the clock tower of the House of Parliament, has in recent years become a familiar sound around the world—and, thanks to the fact that my shortwave still works, is often heard booming through our living room. No bell tone seems exactly like it, nor more dear.

English village bells, though, are to me among the sweetest of bell sounds. The morning or evening church bells, heard across the fields, and associated with the walking toward the open church door of village folk—this among pre-war memories of Britain which are cherished these long intervening years. Then there were the change-rings. I recall a gay wedding in Dorchester, after which such a tumbling and crowding of bell tones followed as I had never heard, and all in perfect, intricate pattern.

There are bell-ringers on Beacon Hill here in Boston on Christmas Eve, and the custom has grown, until in many other places similar New World bell-ringers may be found. There are the ancient hand bells, each ringer responsible for two tones in the scale. (Boston has church bells also, perhaps more than are still left in most New World cities.)

Carillons, rightly, are increasing in number in the United States. But personally I like one bell, or a few in a chime for playing hymns in a simple, straightforward way. Perhaps association has much to do with it. No bells seem more beautiful, for example, than those which ring out from the windows of this building. Let those who enjoy carillons have them. There should be more. But glad am I for chimes.

At Principia College, at Elsau, one of the students who loves music plays hymns on the chapel chimes at twilight each evening—a sound to be very long remembered in its setting of campus beauty, there on the high bluffs overlooking the Mississippi. There should always be chimes at schools and colleges, and music-loving students to play them reverently. Both are poignantly a part of my own school and college days, and have made them sweeter, enriching the memory with half-heard music down the years.

Good "Bell" Reading

Did we ever mention to you before that Ruth Vennenoweth of Ohio, a bell enthusiast, recommends the book "The Nine Tailors," by Dorothy L. Sayers, as good "bell" reading. She says the plot centers around a bell which makes it appropriate for followers of the bell hobby. Although Mrs. Vennenoweth didn't say, we are inclined to believe that the book is not recent.

Has Goering's Bell

Mrs. T. M. Patton, of Lexington, Ky., has added the 520th bell to her collection—from Herman Goering's home in Germany, sent to her by Corp. Elmond Robinson. The German inscription on the bell was translated by Lexington linguists something like this: "I am true and will always stay true, heaven high in my mind, and I mean it so truly wherever I am."

By A. C. Meyer — $2.50 postpaid

In the last 10 years, semi-retired, Mr. Meyer and his wife, also a bell enthusiast, indulged their hobby of bell collecting, which has taken them to many parts of the world. In every city and virtually every crossroads, they added interesting specimens to their collection. Now "grounded" because of the war, Mr. Meyer has summarized it all in a down-to-earth story.

NATURAL HISTORY

Exploring Nature's Own Storehouse

By F. A. ROGGIE

HOW EASILY hobbies can be formed and how beneficial they may be to the hobbyist!

One Sunday, a few years back, we stopped at Hemlock (New York State) to have our lunch. As we entered the gates at Hemlock Park, we noticed several odd-appearing stones embedded in the pillars of the gates. Some of these looked like fossilized turtles, some like round beads and several other shapes. Examining these stones more closely, one can see the beauty and oddity of them.

If these stones were embedded in these pillars, surely they must exist in that region! So we began looking for some in their natural setting.

Louis C. Wheeler, one of our party, immediately recalled the fact that he knew of a place where these stones might be found, "Hell's Kitchen" or the "Devil's Bedroom." As we rode over to this location we noticed just the merest beginning of what seemed to be a shallow gully.

As we walked along the trail of the creek we noticed pieces of stones sticking out of the banks. We succeeded in digging out a few stones, some of which looked exactly like turtles; others had various forms such as sheep-heads, chickens, animal paws, heads, etc. We illustrate some of these odd forms here.

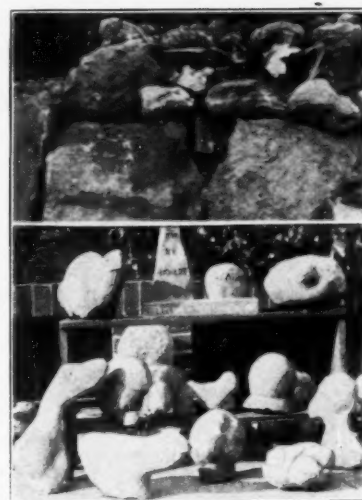

After our first taste of adventure, looking for stones and exploring some really beautiful spots of nature, we began looking for gullies every Sunday, and we have found several, some of which we have named as follows: Frog Hollow, because we found so many frogs there; Owls' Gully, due to the fact that we captured a large horned-owl in this gully, (this owl was down on the ground, an unusual place for an owl in broad daylight, but perhaps due to overeating or some other inability to fly). This owl was given to the Rochester Museum of Arts and Sciences to be used in their nature study cases. Then there is Rattlesnake Gully, in which we killed a rattlesnake, which was trying very hard to digest a frog. This snake we killed, was our good deed toward mankind for that day. In another gully we found a flock of geese on a ledge to one side of the gully. This we named Goose Gully. Then there is Indian Fire Gully, in which we found natural gas coming out of the creek water and from the sides of the ledges in the gully.

We have now been collecting stones for several years and both of us have wonderful collections, including Indian heads and pseudomorphs (shapes resembling various forms, such as animals, parts of animals, etc.).

A thought running through the author's mind while on these exploring trips was; how closely one comes to nature and its Creator, while walking through these beautiful gullies, which although all gullies, vary in width, height and scenery, so that one is always finding new and more beautiful places to be nearer to God.

On one occasion we found a small rattlesnake about eight inches long, crawling along the ground. One of our party nearly stepped on it, and it coiled itself up and prepared to strike whatever or whoever came near it.

Dr. Arthur C. Parker, director of the Rochester Museum of Arts and Sciences, informed us that some of these stones we have collected are about 350 million years old. Some of these stones have various colors, running through them, as they contain various chemicals, iron, sulphur, lime, etc.

Gems and Minerals

HOBBIES 1946 ALL AMERICAN GEM ELEVEN

By S. N. GREEN

THIS IS the seventh Annual "All American Eleven" and being the first peace year after World War II, the selection is of particular interest to collectors. Here is the 1946 Eleven:

- 1st place—Wyoming Jade
- 2nd place—Nevada Turquoise
- 3rd place—Chilian Lapis Lazuli
- 4th place—Utah Variscite
- 5th place—North Carolina Smoky Quartz
- 6th place—Mexican Opal
- 7th place—Michigan Chlorastrolite
- 8th place—Arizona Picture Wood
- 9th place—Montana Scenic Agate
- 10th place—Lake Superior Agate
- 11th place—Montana Sapphire

Jade now seems firmly established in first place. The rush for "green gold" continues with intensity in Wyoming, and has resulted in the finding of a new field. The wide newspaper publicity brought about the rediscovery of Alaska as a source of jade. Dormant since 1898, when jade was reported during the gold stampede of the Klondike, planes are bringing out fine material from the almost inaccessible Kobuk District.

The demand for Turquoise continues strong, making top quality material beyond the reach of the amateur, which results in everyone wanting a bit and everyone voting for it, elevating the gem from fifth to second place.

Chilian Lapis Lazuli still intrigues the cutter and the great popular interest justifies its being placed third. Good material is still hard to obtain, but hopes of more liberal supplies may materialize in the near future.

The appearance of much fine Fairfield Variscite has increased the interest in this splendid Utah material. It is a close rival of Turquoise; in fact, if you see a fine gem that is passing as Turquoise, the chances are that it is Variscite. Its intense color and high polish, together with a fine matrix warrants an even higher rating than fourth place.

More and more attention is being given to Smoky Quartz, both for cabochon and faceting work. The war brought huge quantities of quartz from Brazil and as the smoky type is just as suitable for radio work as the clear, there is a great deal of stock available at low cost. It earns a fifth place position.

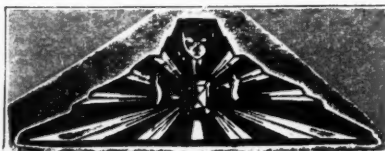

Out of sight, out of mind, is about the only explanation of the drop of Mexican Opal to sixth place. It looks as though it will be a long time before more rough is available, so if you have this entrancing gem in your collection, treasure it.

The lucky seventh place oddly continues to be occupied by Michigan Chlorastrolite. Always a favorite with HOBBIES readers, its charm is admitted by all and if you still lack this gem, you had better give serious attention to filling the niche before it is too late.

The newcomer to the list is Arizona Picture Wood. All types of wood are in great demand for Indian jewelry and the finest of all woods are those that show a beautiful pattern. It really deserves a higher place than eighth.

Agates are always popular and it was a photo finish between Montana Scenic and Lake Superior Agates. The Mountain States like the Scenic and the Middle-West always votes for its native agate which made the ninth and tenth place hotly contested.

The Montana Sapphire has dropped to eleventh place; a humble spot for so noble a gem. In the beginning of the recent war a great demand for the natural crystal developed, but synthetics came into production and about drove the crystal from the industrial market. This is a bit of luck for the amateur cutter, for fine native rough is being offered in increased volume at reasonable prices.

The second team selection is also interesting. It is led by the always in demand blues, Arizona Chrysocolla, Dumortierite, and Amazonite. Breccia Jasper, Poppy Jasper, and Sweetwater Agates are again in the running. Fresh supplies of true Moonstone place this lovely gem in the running again. Pink Tourmaline and Rose Quartz supply the demand for their shades of color. And the faceter votes for the Amethyst and Garnets.

The lore of precious stones is always intended to present a better appreciation of their tradition, history, religious significance and the qualities governing their value.

"Beauty, durability and rarity are the three cardinal virtues of a gem stone. Stones lacking these qualities can not aspire to a high place in the ranks of precious stones, although it does not necessarily follow that they are not important for ornamental purposes.

"Gem stones may be divided into three groups—Transparent—Translucent—and Opaque. The first, which is by far the largest and most important, may itself be subdivided in two sections. Stones which are devoid of color and stones which have color.

"No doubt there are but few people who know the reasons or the origins of birthstones. The story which occurs in the Book of Revelations, where the order in which the twelve foundation stones of the Holy City were laid, is supposed to have determined the order of birthstones.

"At first, people desired to own all twelve stones, wearing a different one for each month, but later each person wore the stone of the month in which he was born. At the present day—the names of the birthstones differ slightly, but the earliest are based either on the list of foundation stones mentioned in Revelations, or upon the gems of the high-priest Aaron's breastplate.

"It is impossible to name the gem stones in any strict order as to value. However, the diamond, ruby, emerald and sapphire are the most precious species. Pearl, though not a stone, is indisputably in the first rank of gems." We quote from M. F. Graven-der's introduction to "Fascinating Facts About Gem Stones," who acknowledges George Frederick Kunz, E. H. Kraus, Robert M. Shipley and G. F. Herbert Smith as his source of information.

MINIATURIA

CAN YOU MATCH THIS?

By JOSEPH H. GRAY

THIS IS the story of Jerry Beigel. It is also the story of a hobby and what it can do for a person in a time of need. Frequently, when writing an article, I resort to a little dressing up to give it more readability, but this tale requires no additions of fiction to fact, because it is a case where truth makes fable pale into insignificance.

Jerry is one of the boys who answered his country's call when we were plunged into World War Two, much against our will. Serving in the European theatre, he awoke one day in a hospital in England, and found several doctors bending over him. The first words he heard were, "Too bad, he will always be that way. His nerves are completely shattered." There was foundation for that remark, for having been blown up by a delayed action bomb near Dover, his nervous system was a wreck, and he had little control of his muscles.

But Jerry Beigel decided he didn't like his present condition or the future that had been viewed for him, so he decided to do something about it. When the doctors had gone their way, he called his nurse and whispered something in her ear. She probably thought he had gone crazy, but with a nerve case the thing to do is to humor the patient, so she brought him the things he had asked for—some match sticks and an old razor blade.

At first, of course, his efforts met with slight success. He broke many match sticks in his first efforts, but slowly he brought his nerves under control so that he was able to produce a little carving that resembled the thing after which it was patterned. As he grew better his work took on a perfection hard to realize, unless you have been privileged to view some of his remarkable carving. Miniature carving is, in itself, an art but when the medium employed is a match stick made of the most fragile wood imaginable, it becomes a work of magic. Among the things he carved were figures of men and women, animals, knives and forks, flowers and most remarkable, perhaps, a church steeple, with bell tower, windows and even the shingles on the roof. He tells me he plans to try a ship one of these days.

Today, fully recovered and discharged from the army he is back home with his family, and is happy in the fact that a hobby has made him once more a useful citizen. What is more he was able to sell, to one of the officials of a big match company, ten of his little carvings for enough money to start him in his own little advertising business.

Now every chance that he gets, Jerry visits the veterans' hospitals spreading the gospel of his hobby in the effort to light the way for others with the same affliction as his own. For some, if the will is there, it will work. With others it will not.

Makers of miniatures require time and patience, and many of our handicapped veterans have lots of both. The field is wide open. People are clamoring for fine miniatures. There are not enough real artists to meet the demand. If you know a veteran with time on his hands and an inclination to make tiny things tell him about Jerry Beigel. It may be the means of restoring his courage besides boosting his income if he can bring his skill to a point of sufficient perfection.

Opera in Miniature

"The world's only opera in miniature," might well be the description of the plays produced by Fredrik A. Chramer of Chicago. Mr. Chramer, a well-known restaurateur, some time ago conceived the idea of presenting a complete opera on a small stage, using puppets as the actors, and employing recordings of operas to provide the musical background. Since putting his idea into action, Mr. Chramer has devoted much time and money to development of the hobby. The third floor of his home was converted into a 95-seat theater. A garage in the rear of his building was utilized as a workshop, and there two co-workers design and build the miniature settings for his productions.

Under the miniature stage at each presentation, girl music students operate the puppets according to Mr.

Chramer's instructions. And, so exacting is the instruction, that it is said soon after the performance begins, the audience is unaware that they are viewing inanimate puppets, but look upon the production as real-life presentations.

The theater itself was designed by Mr. Chramer, the proscenium being modeled after those in the Chicago Civic Opera house and in the Royal Opera House in Copenhagen, Denmark. The equipment for the different plays, of which there are 15 in the repertoire, includes 600 puppets, 750 costumes, cases of minute and exactly reproduced banquet tables, thrones, swords, chairs, china and beds, lofts of scenery, and at least six sets of recordings for each of 21 operas.

Miniaturia in the White House

A newspaper columnist calls attention to the fact that President Truman's desk bears a miniature plowshare which has been added since V-J day. He tells observing visitors that it is his job to beat swords back into plowshares. He also likes to tell visitors that he can plow a real furrow with a real plow. The miniaturia field is also represented on the President's desk by a toy jeep and a small donkey.

"At the Sign of the Crest"

O'Dougherty Coat-of-Arms

By MABEL LOUISE KEECH

"WHY DON'T you write up an Irish Coat-of-Arms sometime?" and "You have not written about an Irish family for so long!" Of course I would not slight you purposely for anything in the world, but in my rather irregular plan for selecting these names, the Emerald Isle had not come to my attention recently.

But it came just in the right time—didn't it? For St. Patrick's Day! So have a good time—all you who are O'Doughertys, or akin to them, no matter what the spelling of the name—and the rest of us will enjoy the day with you.

The Irish names are usually the least difficult of any to work on, when establishing Coats-of-Arms—because they nearly always come from one root, with few variations; and if the family is one of the ancient Milesian lines, all of the name have descended from the first one of the name.

BUT—find the name in its original spelling—if you can! Some you would never recognize. For instance: Fennessy was "Feimidhe"; Flanagan started with "Callial"; etc.

The description of the O'Dougherty Armorial Bearing, is registered in Burke's General Armory, which says: "A Sept of Ulster, of the same race as O'Boyle, deriving their names from Dochartaigh, Chief of the territory of Cinel-Edna and Ard-Miodhair, county Donegal; Brien Duff O'Dogherty, Lord of Ennishowen, was killed in rebellion 1608, when all his lands were forfeited."

Fairbairn's Book of Crests confirms this crest; and the same Coat-of-Arms is recorded in O'Hart's Irish Pedigrees, and Rooney's Genealogies of Irish Families. Excerpts from the articles in the two last-named books follows this interpretation.

He beareth for Arms: Argent a stag springing gules on a chief vert three mullets of the first. Crest—A hand couped at the wrist erect grasping a sword all proper. (Another crest—A greyhound courant argent holding in the mouth a hare proper.) Motto—Ar mDuthchas: "For my inheritance."

Translated into non-Heraldic terms: A silver (argent) shield, across the upper one-third of which is a green (vert) band or chief on which are three silver ("of the first" color named) stars or mullets. In the lower two-thirds on the silver shield is a red (gules) stag springing in the air. The crest is a hand erect cut off straight at the wrist (couped) grasping a sword; these colors are all natural or "proper". Another crest that is sometimes used is a silver (argent) greyhound in running attitude (courant) holding a hare of natural color in its mouth.

The stag is symbolical of one skillful in music and a lover of harmony, or of one that is politic and well foresees his time and opportunities; or again, of one who is unwilling to assail the enemy rashly, but rather desirous to stand on his own ground honestly than to annoy another wrongfully. To summarize—policy, peace, and harmony. The stag is also granted in recognition of administrative ability.

The chief is one of nine so-called "Honourable Ordinaries", straight-sided symbols occupying one-third of the shield, and first used to identify men in armour. The position of the chief, the upper one-third, symbolizes the head of the body of the soldier and therefore is considered the most important part of the shield, and any charge thereon takes precedence over those in the base of the shield. The chief is emblematical of rank, authority, dignity, and dominion.

The star is a Crusader emblem, the symbol of one who is above the ruder sort of men, and whose influence shines afar as the beams of the star.

The sword is "a weapon fitted for execution and justice, a true emblem of military honour, and should incite the bearer to a just and generous pursuit of honour and virtue in warlike deeds". It denotes preparation for service to one's country.

Colors are representative of the personal characteristics of the original bearer, and granted only if he be worthy. Silver signifies sincerity and peace; red, courage and magnanimity; green, sturdiness and strength.

ABOUT THE O'DOUGHERTYS

O'Hart begins his pedigrees with "ADAM", and in the 36th generation reaches Milesius, King of Spain, who lived about the time of King Solomon. From this line to the O'Dougherty name were (to name a few) Heremon, son of Milesius; Conn Caecathach (Conn of the Hundred Battles) living in 119 A. D., Niall Mor, 126th monarch of Ireland; Fergus; Feaman, brother of Muirceartach and Maolduin. From the line of Muirceartach came the O'Donels.

Fiamhan (or Fianamhain) is the 99th generation from Adam, and his descendants were Lords of Innishowen.

Dochartaigh or O'Dochartaigh (from "Docher", the Irish for "Harm"), was the grandson of Fiamhan and the first to have a form of the present name of O'Dogherty. The name was anglicised to Docharty, Dogherty, Dougherty, O'Dogherty and O'Dougherty. (The prefix "O" means "House of".)

O'Hart gives the same Coat-of-Arms as Burke's General Armory and Rooney, and it is pictured in Vol. I, Plate 4, #367, but Rooney has a more accurate drawing, though he uses the 2nd crest—a greyhound.

Connor-an-Einigh was the first of the family who settled in Innishowen and he lived about 1400. John Oge was the 125th generation and his son was Sir Cahir O'Dogherty, first of the name as it is today, who was Lord of Innishowen, living in 1608.

He, when only 21 years of age, raised an insurrection against the English in Ulster, "being unable to tolerate the insolence and tyranny of Sir George Paulett, Governor of Derry". Sir Cahir left no issue, but his brother John, who died in 1638, was father of those of the name.

From a Genealogical History of Irish Families, by John Rooney.

The O'Doherty family is descended from Milesius, King of Spain, through the branch of Heremon, eighth son of that monarch. The O'Dochartaigh, or O'Dohertys, were a powerful sept, a branch of the O'Donnells, and became chiefs of Innishowen. The founder of the family was Conal Gulban, ancestor of the Northern Hy Nials, and son of Nial of the Nine Hostages, King of Ireland, A. D. 379. The ancient name was O'Donnell, and signifies "Grandson of the Destroyer." The possessions of the sept were in the present Counties of Donegal and Mayo. O'Doherty, chief of Ard Miodhair, is mentioned in the Annals of the Four Masters, at 1197 A. D., as being chief of all Tircennell. The O'Dohertys were prominent in resisting the encroachments of the English and succeeded in maintaining their position as chiefs of Innishowen, and retaining possession of their estates until the reign of James the First of England, when their lands were included in the six Ulster counties which that monarch confiscated from their owners, to bestow them on his indigent court favorites. By a sort of retributive justice many of the recipients of these stolen lands turned to be inveterate enemies of his family.

After the power of the chieftains of the North had been finally broken, and the Earls of Tyrone and Tirconnell had fled to the Continent, the standard of resistance was once more raised by Cahir O'Doherty, a young chieftain of this family. He had suffered the spoliation of part of his lands, and had been charged with rebellion by Sir George Paulet, the Governor of Derry, who publicly insulted him, and struck him in the face. O'Doherty at once raised the standard of rebellion and took fearful and summary vengeance on his enemies. . . . A contemporary writer describes this last of the O'Doherty chieftains as "a man to be marked among a thousand, a man of the loftiest and proudest bearing in Ulster; his Spanish hat with the heron's plume was too often the terror of his enemies, and the rallying point of his friends, not to bespeak the O'Doherty. He was brave and chivalrous, faithful in his engagements, firm and prompt in the execution of his designs, but implacable in his resentments".

A Genealogical History of Irish Families, with their crests and armorial bearings. p. 131. John Rooney.

The O'Doherty Family

By the Spanish plum'd hat, and the costly attire,
And the dark eye that's blended of midnight and fire,
And the bearing and stature so princely and tall,
Sir Cahir you'll know in the midst of them all.

Like an oak on the land, like a ship on the sea,
Like the eagle above, strong and haughty, is he,
In the greenness of youth—yet he's crowned as his due,
With the fear of the false, and the love of the true.

Right fiercely he swoops on their plundering hordes,
Right proudly he dares them, the proud English lords!
And darkly you'll trace him by many a trail,
From the hills of the North to the heart of the Pale!

By red field, ruined keep, and fire-shrouded hall,
By the tramps of the charger o'er buttress and wall;
By the courage that springs in the breach of despair,
Like the bound of the lion erect from his lair!

O'Neill and O'Donnell, Maguire and the rest,
Have sheathed their saber, and lowered the crest;
O'Cahan is crushed, and McMahon is bound,
And Magennis slinks after the foe like his hound.

But high and untrimmed, o'er the valley and height,
Soars the proud sweeping pinion so young in its flight;
The toil and the danger are brav'd all alone,
By the fierce-taloned falcon of old Innishowen!

And thus runs the story—he fought and he fell,
Young, honor'd and brave—so the Seanachies tell:
The foremost of those who have guarded the "green,"
When men wrote thie names with the sword and the skian!

—Mary Eva Kelly.

FRANKLIN AGAIN!

In the January issue I quoted from a letter written by a Benjamin Franklin of Philadelphia, who was not of the immediate family of the one we call our "Great American Patriot". Since that time I have had a new client, a Mrs. Benjamin Franklin from the middle west, who says her husband is a direct descendant of James, the brother of Benjamin. And, in a recent letter from the friend who made the Christmas Wiswall article possible, she says that her ancestor Samuel Wiswall, married Elizabeth, a cousin of Benjamin's, but does not say who was the uncle, brother of Benjamin's father Josiah.

CREST CORNER

Believe it or not—I am writing this article in honor of St. Patrick, on New Year's Eve! As it is too late for any comment on the latter, and I do not know anything that you do not know about the former, I shall change the subject entirely.

Sometimes I have told you that I thought for their own sakes, and for that of their pupils, a school-teacher—and even a College Professor, should know more about Heraldry than the average one does. So many studies would be easier and more interesting; and it is splendid for any person to be conversant on a subject that in this country is not so familiar.

But here is a new story. A school teacher rather new in his own position, was introducing to his superintendent a prospect for the school. The superintendent, in showing the two young men around the building, called their attention to the Tudor shields painted into one of the mural decorations. He made a misleading statement, and the new teacher very carefully and courteously gave his version which was quite different, but proved to the superintendent his own error. The visitor was invited to accept the position offered, and in his invitation, the superintendent said: "If your friends are so well-versed in unusual subjects, you are wise in your selection, and must also be ambitious in your intellectual goals". This wise teacher has just returned from the war zones, and finding other peoples much more interested in their family histories than those in the United States appear to be, has new aims to train his youthfulness in appreciation of the lives and achievements of their ascendants.

'TWAS ONCE NEWS

Says the recent issue of The Old Farmer's Almanac: "In 1797 Mr. Thomas was a bookseller and stationer at Sterling, Mass. One of the books he used to sell was Robinson Crusoe."

Time is a great leveler. Deadwood Dick and other dime novels of the not so terribly long ago now are housed in the Library of Congress, along with Shakespearean volumes.

The term "dime novel" is applied to paper-back volumes which were priced from five cents up. The small, complete novels were known rather uncomplimentarily as "Yelk-whack." There were continued stories, too, with long installments issued weekly and a few monthly.

Some say that it was the movies that dealt a death blow to the dime novel, for the first moving pictures followed the dime novel pattern, with ill treated working girls, life and death battles on precipices, and dust-biting redskins.

Old Trinity Church, New York City, has played a part, perhaps unwillingly, in scenes in the popular story papers of the past 85 years. Among the illustrations of such scenes, perhaps the most engaging is one shown on the Nov. 14, 1885, edition of the Boys of New York. It pictures an exciting moment in the opening installment of "Bats in the Wall," by P. T. Raymond. The mother of one of the boys is pictured kneeling in the snow trying to persuade him to keep out of a plot to rob a bank.

Gilbert F. Dodds, writing of Ohio Anecdotes in the Columbus, Ohio, journal, calls attention to an Ohio pioneer, who he says, deserves to be remembered not only for his virtues and services, but also for his writings of travel and observations. He is William J. Bates, who published the Miscellaneous Repository at Mt. Pleasant, Ohio, for a number of years. Says Dodds, further:

"In September, 1829, Bates made a journey across the state to attend a meeting at Richmond, Ind. He kept a journal of the tour which was published in volume three of his magazine. On his way to Richmond he stopped in Columbus and made some observations of interest. On Sept. 23, he records: 'Walked on top of the state house which was built in 1816. The view affords an extensive prospect over the rich, low grounds through which the Scioto winds its way, bordered with trees—of the town of Franklinton on the opposite side—and the widespread forests which skirt the horizon both east and west.'

"Mr. Bates also tells of the wooden bridge being constructed across the Scioto by Mr. Sullivan and the advantages it will bring the new town.

"His travel story has a force and piquancy that makes it readable today, and the bias in favor of his religious belief adds a relish to its pages."

Books Received

A new and interesting Indian book has just come off the press from the pen of Virgil Y. Russell, head of the Social Science Department of Natrona County High School in Casper, Wyoming. It is entitled "Indian Artifacts of the Rockies" and covers the subject in a well written, entertaining manner. The illustrations, both from Mr. Russell's own collection and other sources, are particularly good, and the detail is shown up more than is seen in the average Indian book. Certainly it will be one of the favorite books in any Indian collector's library, and we unhesitatingly recommend it.

The price of this edition is $2.25.

The Wisconsin Folklore Society of Madison, Wisconsin, has issued a couple of very interesting booklets commemorating the old Paul Bunyan days in the northern woods. For collectors of this material these booklets are extremely interesting. No price is given so that those who are interested will have to write for details.

The Picture POST CARD

GARDENS ON POST CARDS

By BERYL STEWART

Note: In the following discussion references to any garden indicate that modern post cards of that particular scene are available.

ALTHOUGH colored cards picturing formal gardens are usually too highly colored, those cards do interest the general collector of post cards. Garden cards highlight a collection; they add glamour and romance; they give picture-book beauty and charm to a collection.

Formal gardening reached its height in England after 1660. Charles II, who had lived in France during the Commonwealth, brought French customs into England. The English under the influence of Neo-Classicism, believed that man should control nature; anything in its natural state was distasteful. One writer even went so far as to express regret that God had not arranged the stars in geometric design!

Borrowing their ideas from the French, English noblemen landscaped their estates. Elaborate landscaping, rock gardens, grottoes, mazes, floral emblems, fountains, and statues interested everybody. A most popular showplace was Turckenham, the estate of Alexander Pope. Every tree was trained to geometric symmetry; ingenious boxwood forms were devised; each hedge was trimmed to perfection. All this was lavish, but its popularity caused excesses beyond the rules of art.

Interest in formal gardening spread to the Southern Colonies, where space, climate, labor, and wealth were favorable. The South still has the finest gardens.

Middleton Gardens of Charleston, S. C., and Bellingrath Gardens of Mobile, Ala., are among the best gardens. Middleton Gardens, the first formal gardens in the Colonies, were completed in 1750. In every way, Middleton Gardens represent the best of English garden craft. Within Middleton Gardens is the tomb of Arthur Middleton, a signer of the Declaration of Independence and President of the First Continental Congress. Of Middleton Gardens Amy Lowell wrote: "Step lightly down these terraces; They are records of a dream."

Other famous gardens in the South are Crowle Gardens in Augusta; Wormsloe in Savannah; Epping Forest in Jacksonville; and Magnolia Gardens in Charleston. Of Magnolia Gardens, John Galsworthy said, "They are the most beautiful gardens in the world."

The largest gardens in America are Shaw's Gardens in St. Louis. Only the Royal Gardens at Kew, England, surpass them in size. Shaw's Gardens cover 125 acres and contain collections of rare plants from all over the world.

Lambert Gardens in Portland, Ore., cover several acres. They were planned for the express purpose of educating the public in the highest ideal of gardening. The Royal Rose Arbor is court for the queen of the Rose Festival.

Sarasota, Fla., has the famous Jungle Gardens noted for tropical and sub-tropical plants.

Sunken gardens are always popular because of their terraces, fountains, pools, and floral designs. Longwood Gardens, Wilmington, Del., are exact replicas of those in Eighteenth Century England. The Water Garden in Longwood is the finest in America. Other sunken gardens are: Italian Gardens in Richmond; Sunken Gardens in Charleston; Public Gardens in Boston; and Mitchell Park in Milwaukee.

Arbors and trellises add to the scenic beauty of rose gardens. The Hershey Rose Gardens, Hershey, Pa., contain 30,000 rose plants of 700 varieties. The rose arches in parks of New Britain and of Waterbury, Conn., are frequently photographed. New Orleans, Fort Worth, and Portland, Ore., have famous rose gardens.

Of all parks Roger Williams Park in Providence is best known to the card collector. Many cards picture its floral emblems: The American Flag; The Floral Clock; Gates Ajar; and The American Legion Emblem. Elizabeth Park of Hartford, Conn., is frequently photographed because of its rock gardens, perennial gardens, rose gardens, rose arches, and floral emblems.

At Sandusky, Ohio, there is a floral emblem of the Liberty Bell. More than 20,000 plants are used to make the design. At Brackenridge Park, San Antonio, Tex., is a star emblem for the Lone Star State. The American Legion floral emblem Kilburn Park, Milwaukee, measures 50 feet in diameter and contains 6200 plants. At Wadsworth, Kansas, is the only known floral globe in the world. This globe, built in 1910, is 16 feet in diameter. Contrasts in foliage distinguish oceans and continents.

Boxwood designs are of especial beauty. At Hills and Dales, La Grange, Ga., the visitor may see designs of bunches of grapes and lettering of "God Is Love."

AN OPEN LETTER

TO ALL SUBSCRIBERS, READERS AND FRIENDS OF HOBBIES:

HOBBIES is going to publish a book (tentatively entitled Shrines For the Tourist Collector) which will have a two-fold purpose:

1. To aid in publicizing such private and public museums and shrines throughout America that have special attraction to collectors, hobbyists and the American people in general who will travel the country's highways in future years, and
2. To act as a guide to the many people who will respond to this attraction, giving them such pertinent information necessary to planning their itineraries to include visits at the places of particular interest.

NOW, here is where we need the help of our many friends and readers. If you have knowledge of a private museum or historical shrine in your locality which you think will fit into the plan of our book, won't you please drop us a postal card, giving us the name and address? We will do the rest. You will be doing your community a favor—as well as HOBBIES. We will certainly appreciate it.

We also want names of private antique shops near these shrines that are worthy of a visit.

*Cordially,
